

Guidance on inspecting providers registered on both the Childcare and the Early Years Registers

The aim of this guidance is to assist inspectors to carry out inspections of providers who are registered on both the Childcare and the Early Years Registers. In these circumstances, during the inspection of the early years provision, inspectors should seek the provider's confirmation that the requirements of the Childcare Register and any conditions relating to registration on that register are met.

This guidance supplements the main inspection guidance for early years provision which are The evaluation schedule for inspections of registered early years provision and Conducting early years inspections.

About this guidance

The aim of this guidance is to assist inspectors when carrying out inspections of providers who are registered on both the Childcare and the Early Years Registers. It sets out how inspectors should judge compliance with the requirements of the Childcare Register during the inspection of the early years provision.

Background

Most providers on the Early Years Register are also on the Childcare Register, giving them the opportunity to care for children of all ages. For the purposes of this guidance we refer to early years and later years provision to distinguish between the registers.

When a person is registered on both registers, inspectors should inspect the early years provision and, at the same time, ask the provider, or the person-in-charge, to confirm that the later years provision complies with Childcare Register requirements and any conditions of registration relating to that provision.¹

The Childcare Register requirements

The ongoing requirements for compulsory registration on the Childcare Register are set out in the left-hand column of the table in annex A.² The table also highlights:

- differences between the requirements for compulsory and voluntary registration on the Childcare Register
- links to the safeguarding and welfare requirements of the Early Years Foundation Stage
- some differences between the requirements of the Childcare Register and the Early Years Foundation Stage.

Confirming compliance with Childcare Register requirements

The compliance confirmation does not involve an evaluation of the quality of the later years provision and should not detract from the early years inspection which must take priority.

Inspectors should only pursue any issues about compliance with the Childcare Register requirements if evidence emerges during the course of the early years inspection that one or more of the Childcare Register requirements are not being met. This would normally be because the provider is also failing to meet the requirements of the Early Years Foundation Stage.

¹ Referred to in this guidance as a 'compliance confirmation'.

² These are given in full in the Childcare (General Childcare Register) Regulations 2008 [2008 No. 975]; <http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukxi/2008/975/contents/made>.

If inspectors have significant concerns about the later years provision they should either raise actions relating to the requirements that they judge are not met; or where necessary discuss the appropriate course of action with the compliance, investigation and enforcement (CIE) team. The criteria for referral to the CIE team are the same as those set out in Conducting early years inspections paragraph 78.³

No later years children on roll or present

Inspectors should ask the provider or manager to confirm compliance even if no children to whom the Childcare Register provision applies are on roll or present at the time of the inspection. This is because we will not return to carry out a stand-alone inspection of that part of the provision – unless we subsequently receive a complaint relating specifically to the registered later years provision.

Before the early years inspection

Ofsted sends an information pack to the Inspection Service Provider giving details about whether an Early Years Register provider is registered on the compulsory and/or voluntary parts of the Childcare Register.

Contacting providers

Providers receive little or no notice of their early years inspections. Inspectors should only telephone early years childminders, and settings that do not meet regularly, before the inspection to check that they are operating on the day they plan to visit.

However if inspectors make a telephone call they should ask for details of the Childcare Register provision and explain that the inspection will include a check of the requirements of the Childcare Register. Inspectors should refer the provider to Are you ready for your inspection pages 12–13, which explains inspections of Childcare Register provision.⁴

During the early years inspection

Arrival

Inspectors should explain that:

- as well as inspecting the early years provision there will be a check of compliance with the requirements of the Childcare Register

³ Conducting early years inspections (120087) Ofsted, 2012; www.ofsted.gov.uk/resources/120087

⁴ Are you ready for your inspection (120085) Ofsted, 2012; www.ofsted.gov.uk/resources/120085.

- the provider must have the required records and statements ready for inspection should the inspector wish to see them
- the inspector will check any aspect where evidence suggests that one or more of the Childcare Register requirements are not being met
- any non-compliance will be included during the feedback meeting at the end of the early years inspection, and the outcome will appear at the end of the early years report.

Meeting with the provider/manager

Inspectors should check with the provider or manager that they understand and comply with the requirements for the Childcare Register during the meeting with them. This should not involve going through the full list of requirements and inspectors should sample policies and procedures on a similar basis to the early years inspection.⁵ This should involve:

- the record of Criminal Records Bureau checks and a selection of recruitment records (where applicable)
- qualifications, including first aid
- the complaints record.

Inspectors must give the provider a draft of the 'information about the setting' section of the early years report to check for factual accuracy and this should reference the Childcare Register provision.

Inspectors should record the outcome of the compliance check for the Childcare Register and any supporting evidence in their evidence for the early years inspection.

Checking compliance

Inspectors should follow up any compliance issues that arise from the interview with the manager or during the course of the early years inspection. This is likely to be straightforward when the children in the early years and the later years age groups are cared for together by the same people, for example in childminding or childcare on domestic premises settings. In these circumstances evidence of Childcare Register requirements regarding suitability, premises, ratios, qualifications and safeguarding procedures is likely to emerge during collection of evidence for the leadership and management of the Early Years Foundation Stage provision.

In some settings children of different ages may be cared for separately and by different people; for example, a nursery may provide out-of-school care in a different part of the building with different staff. In these circumstances inspectors should spend a short period of time in the later years provision to make sure requirements are met and put into practice. Inspectors must:

⁵ Conducting early years inspections, para 54

- make sure there are no children in the Early Years Foundation Stage attending any out-of-school care (for example children attending wrap-around care who are in reception class at school). If there are, inspectors must inspect the quality of provision for those children and take this into account when making judgements about the provision overall
- consider the impact of any non-compliance with requirements of the Childcare Register on judgements about the leadership and management of the setting overall. Generally a setting's leadership and management cannot be judged as better than satisfactory if there is a failure to meet requirements in part of it.

Looking at the setting as a whole

Although similar to some of the safeguarding and welfare requirements of the Early Years Foundation Stage, the Childcare Register requirements are not fully aligned and are specific to the later years provision. Inspectors must consider the differences between the Childcare Register requirements and the Early Years Foundation Stage safeguarding and welfare requirements (see annex A), and bear in mind the following points.

Ratios

In childminding provision, children may be left in the care of a suitable assistant for a maximum of two hours in any one day, where parents have agreed to this, on both registers. However for the Childcare Register the agreement from parents must be in writing. For the Early Years Register the consent does not have to be written.

In the case of group care, inspectors should distinguish between the ratios where the early years provision is separate from the later years provision, but they do not have to do so where the provision is together. For example, three members of staff are sufficient for 20 three- and four-year-olds who are cared for alongside four children aged six and seven. But if the later years children are cared for in a separate part of the premises, then normally a minimum of four members of staff would be required: three for the children in the early years age group and one for the later years age group depending on the layout of the premises.

Documentation and information

Later years providers are required to have the records and statements set out in annex B. Childminders on the compulsory part of the Childcare Register must have the required statements for the later years provision in writing – even though they are not required to have written policies and procedures for the Early Years Foundation Stage.

There is no need for a provider to keep separate sets of policies, procedures and records for the early years provision and later years provision. However, if records cover the whole setting and it operates as two distinct provision types such as a nursery and out of school care the documents should note any differences in procedures regarding the early and later years provision.

The required information about the later years provision for parents (see annex A: paragraph 24) can form part of the information about the whole setting.

It is acceptable that valid public liability insurance covers the whole setting.

Equipment

If there are no later years children on roll, it is not necessary for providers to have a full range of equipment at the time of the early years inspection.

Risk assessments

Risk assessments can be made on the premises and equipment as a whole. Where this is the case the provider should be alert to any possible differences in risks to children in the early years and the later years age groups: for example, by allowing children in the early years age group unsupervised access to computers or large climbing apparatus in the garden. Risk assessments do not need to be in writing for early or later years provision. However health and safety legislation has specific requirements for risk assessments that requires a written record of significant findings of risk assessments where five or more staff are employed. For those on the Childcare Register risk assessments must be reviewed annually, whereas the Early Years Foundation Stage requires them to be reviewed regularly.

Complying with other legislation

The Childcare Register requirements specifically mention compliance with section 21 of the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 regarding the physical features of the premises.⁶ Inspectors should consider what impact the failure to comply with the Disability Discrimination Act 1995 has on the early years provision, particularly on the judgement for leadership and management.

The adverse impact of later years provision on early years provision

The later years provision must not have an adverse effect on the provision for children in the early years age group. For example, the behaviour of children in the later years age group should not disrupt the early years provision or provide poor role models for the social skills and learning habits of children in the early years age group. If it does, inspectors should take this into account when reaching judgements on the quality of early years provision. Inspectors should report any impact of the later years provision which has a significant effect on the early years judgements.

⁶ Disability Discrimination Act 1995; <http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/1995/50/contents>.

Similarly, the early years provision must not adversely affect that for the children in the later years age group (see annex A, paragraph 18).

The outcome of the Childcare Register inspection

The possible outcomes are:

- met
 - the provider confirms that he or she complies with all requirements of the Childcare Register; and there is no evidence which indicates otherwise
- not met (actions)
 - there is evidence of non-compliance which requires action by the provider but the inspector judges the provider is willing and able to make the necessary improvements
- not met (enforcement action)
 - there is evidence of non-compliance which raises significant concerns about the later years provision and the inspector judges enforcement action is appropriate

The table in annex C sets out examples of non-compliance that would lead to one or other of the above 'not met' outcomes.

If there are significant concerns about the later years provision and inspectors believe the children to be at risk of harm they must consult the CIE team prior to feedback.

Giving feedback

The guidance on giving feedback for the early years inspection is in Conducting early years inspections, pages 17–18.

At the feedback meeting, inspectors should also tell the childminder, provider or manager the outcome of any compliance check with the Childcare Register and substantiate this with evidence, where necessary.

Feedback should be brief, even where the later years provision is non-compliant, and should not detract from feedback on the quality of the early years provision.

Feedback on the later years provision should include:

- the outcome of the compliance check
- an explanation of any requirements which are not being met and the evidence for this
- any action Ofsted intends to raise
- how and where the compliance confirmation and any actions will appear in the early years report.

Where overall requirements are not being met and enforcement action is needed, inspectors should explain the range of options open to Ofsted. In more serious cases where children are, or may be, at risk of harm, Ofsted may suspend the Childcare Register registration to allow time to investigate the circumstances. Ultimately Ofsted may decide to cancel registration if there is reason to believe that the provider has failed to do one of the following:

- comply with the requirements
- comply with a condition imposed on their registration
- pay the annual fee.

Ofsted may, in rare cases, decide to caution or prosecute any registered person that commits an offence under the relevant parts of the Childcare Act 2006. This includes failure to comply with a condition of registration.

Inspectors should inform the provider that Ofsted will let them know as soon as possible what enforcement action it will take.

Including information in the early years report

The following option in the early years report template will automatically be displayed if the provider is registered on both or either part of the Childcare Register.

The provision is also registered on the voluntary and/or compulsory part(s) of the Childcare Register. This report includes a judgment about compliance with the requirements of that register.

Inspectors should mention the nature of the Childcare Register provision in the 'information about the setting' section but do not need to go into detail. For example:

- Parkview Holiday and After School Club opened in April 2003 and is one of a chain of clubs managed by Best Childcare Ltd. It operates from two portacabins in the grounds of Parkview Community Centre in Hillside. Children have access to a nearby toilet block and can play in the grounds of the centre under supervision.
- The club is open each weekday from 07.45 to 09.00 and from 15.30 to 18.30 during term time; and from 07.45 to 18.30 during school holidays. There are eight places for children in the Early Years Foundation Stage.
- The club also offers 20 places for children aged between five and eleven years before and after school: this provision is registered on the Childcare Register. Children occupying these places share the same facilities as the children in the early years age range.

- There are eight permanent staff members, six of whom hold relevant childcare qualifications, and two others are completing training to achieve a level 2 childcare qualification.

The main body of the early years report should not include an evaluation of any provision registered on the Childcare Register. However, inspectors should report its impact on the provision for children in the Early Years Foundation Stage should be included in the most appropriate section of the report if it is a significant factor in judgements for the early years provision.

Updating registration details after the inspection

You may need to amend details of the registration relating to the Childcare Register following information you receive during the inspection. Any amendment details should be sent to the National Business Unit which will arrange for the update to provider details.

Annex A: Links between the requirements of the Children Register and the welfare requirements of the Early Years Foundation Stage

The following table sets out the ongoing requirements for compulsory registration on the Childcare Register (first column) and compares these with the requirements for voluntary registration (second column).⁷ It also highlights some notable differences with some of the general Early Years Foundation Stage welfare requirements (third column).
