1 Introduction

Background

1.1 Implementing Integrated Working (IW) includes implementing the Common Assessment Framework for children and young people (CAF), lead professional, service directories, Children Missing Education (CME), the information sharing index (IS Index) and improving practice in information sharing and inter-agency working.

1.2 Implementing the IW processes and tools will:

- support the delivery of Integrated Processes and Integrated Front-Line Delivery, two of the essential components of the children's trust in action; and
- help Local Authorities (LAs) and their partners to meet statutory requirements as laid out in s10, CA 2004 and in statutory guidance on inter-agency co-operation to improve the wellbeing of children.

1.3 Guidance and support materials are available on information sharing, CAF, lead professional, CME and will be made available on the IS Index.

There are also other support materials available including materials on Service Directories, Multi-Agency Working and the implementation roadmap.

1.4 In addition to these guidance and support materials, front-line staff and management will need training to address the specific requirements of the IW processes and tools. This training must be complimentary to training on the Common Core and other professional development.

1.5 It is important to recognise that the training for IW will not just be about training staff on specific new processes and tools, it will be one of the most important vehicles for bringing practitioners together, opening up discussions and facilitating change in practice within a local area.

1.6 In addition it is essential that any implementation activities (including training) associated with IW must be complimentary with, and able to be integrated into, the wider Every Child Matters: Change for Children change programme and other initiatives, and especially training on the Common Core.

1.7 These factors have an impact on the design and development of training materials, as well as delivery of training, and have highlighted the need for a modular approach to training for IW and for core training materials to be developed centrally for local adaptation and use.

Purpose & scope

1.8 The purpose of this document is to highlight the core training materials that are available to support local implementation of IW and to present an outline strategy and plan for local development and delivery of IW training.

1.9 This document includes outline training strategies and plans for the following processes and tools:

- Integrated Working;
- Information sharing guidance;
- Common Assessment Framework for children and young people;
- Lead professional; and
- IS Index.

1.10 This document does not include consideration of the following elements, for the stated reasons:

- Common Core – complimentary to this work, covered elsewhere;
- Multi-agency working – training requirements for setting up, managing and working in multi-agency teams are thought to be appropriately covered elsewhere (SureStart, BEST, CWDC, etc) and do not need to be replicated in this document;
- service directories, children missing education – no specific training requirements related to policy at this stage, may require awareness raising which should be covered by communications; and
- children with significant & complex needs – too early to identify training requirements at this stage.

Terminology

1.11 The term training programme is used to describe training that covers a number of the IW processes and tools. Each process or tool will have a series of training courses associated with it, designed to serve different audiences and situations. Each training course will be composed of one or more training modules.

1.12 Each training course will focus on a specific process or tool but is expected to include short modules on associated elements. A training module will generally relate to a single process or tool.

2 Design principles

Training programme design principles

2.1 An integrated approach to the design of training courses for the IW processes and tools ensures that they fit together as an integrated training programme, as represented here.

2.2 Training modules are designed to be able to be combined in any of the possible permutations. This modular design also allows IW training modules to be incorporated into other training courses, e.g., ICS, safeguarding.

2.3 The design of the training courses for each process or tool takes into consideration all the potential, different training audiences and needs, i.e.:

- Raising awareness amongst strategic and senior managers (could be addressed by communication and/or training);
- Training for practitioners and for operational managers;
- Training for staff with additional responsibilities for advice or control related to processes or tools, e.g. professional advisors, Integrated Service Managers, Information Sharing Officers, IS Index mediated access contacts;
- Training for trainers; and
- Introductory, overview or refresher training to be included in other process or tool training courses.

Training course design principles

2.4 A standard template (brand) is used in the production of training materials, aligned with communications branding for ECM.

2.5 Key ECM background and messages (see section 3.2 Common Messages below) are included in a consistent manner across training courses to reinforce important points through repetition and to eliminate potential for mixed messages and confusion amongst practitioners.

- All training courses have a standard course content, as follows:
- Introduction to course (course content and objectives);
- Background and context setting within ECM (common messages);
- Other common messages – interspersed at relevant points;
- Introduction to specific process or tool;
- Detailed training on specific process or tool;
- Real-life scenarios and exercises on specific process or tool – interspersed at relevant points;
- Intro, refresh or awareness module(s) on associated process or tool(s) – interspersed at relevant points; and
- Recap on course content and objectives.

2.7 An outline training plan is presented in Appendix 1 with suggested training courses and modules for the different audiences and suggested sequencing for the courses.

2.8 A description of each of the modules is provided in Appendix 2, with the exception of IS Index training which will be detailed in a separate training strategy.

Training course delivery principles

2.9 There are a number of delivery principles that need to be incorporated into the local design of training courses and communicated clearly to all involved in planning and delivery of local training.

2.10 Key principles for delivery of IW training are:

- Training to be delivered in a multi-agency setting to help build networks, understanding of other's roles and situations and start to break down professional silos;
- Specific activities and time for attendees to get to know each other are incorporated into each training course to make the most of the multi-agency opportunity;
- Specific activities and time for experiential learning are incorporated into each training course to provide attendees with opportunities to test, reflect and discuss the changes to working practices; and
- Building of practitioner networks amongst attendees will be facilitated by providing mechanisms for them to keep in touch with one another after a training course, e.g. contact lists, mediated discussion forums, web chat rooms.
- Where training is to be cascaded via a "train-the trainer" programme, always follow up with a call to each attendee 2 weeks after the initial training to ascertain how the materials are being received by their colleagues. If not yet started, continue these calls until the training is being cascaded.

3. Training content

Training material outline

3.1 For each core training course the following materials have been developed:

- Course outline (1 pager describing course content, objective and target audiences) – included in this document;
- Course specification (more detailed information describing course content, learning objectives, timings, target audiences) – included in delivery / trainer guide;
- Training materials (presentation, exercise materials and handouts);
- Delivery / trainer guide.

Common messages

3.2 There are a set of common messages and subjects to be included in every training course and presented in a consistent manner. These include:

- Recap of the duties imposed by Children Act 1989 and 2004 and the ECM:CfC agenda, outcomes and targets presented in a standard manner;
- Standard messages on the benefits for children, young people and families and for practitioners (also for organisations?);
- Standard messages on the need to:
 - take a holistic view of the child or young person's needs;
 - be proactive in identifying and addressing needs;
 - use resources from own service where possible / appropriate;
 - adhere to good practice in recording information;
 - obtain consent when appropriate; and
 - share information where relevant and appropriate, emphasising that sharing of information within and across agency boundaries is expected and justifiable; and
 - what do if you are worried that a child is being abused;
- References for sources of further information (including more detailed training materials).

4. Distribution of materials

Making training materials available

4.1 Training materials will be made available to LAs and Practitioner Organisations via a number of routes:

- available for download from the ECM / CWDC website;
- available on request from DfES by email or CD-ROM;
- forwarded (by previous arrangement) to public and commercial training bodies, professional associations and governing bodies.
