Any response you send us will be seen in full by Welsh Government staff dealing with the issues which this consultation is about. It may also be seen by other Welsh Government staff to help them plan future consultations.

The Welsh Government intends to publish a summary of the responses to this document. We may also publish responses in full. Normally, the name and address (or part of the address) of the person or organisation who sent the response are published with the response. This helps to show that the consultation was carried out properly. If you do not want your name or address published, please tell us this in writing when you send your response. We will then blank them out.

Names or addresses we blank out might still get published later, though we do not think this would happen very often. The Freedom of Information Act 2000 and the Environmental Information Regulations 2004 allow the public to ask to see information held by many public bodies, including the Welsh Government. This includes information which has not been published. However, the law also allows us to withhold information in some circumstances. If anyone asks to see information we have withheld, we will have to decide whether to release it or not. If someone has asked for their name and address not to be published, that is an important fact we would take into account. However, there might sometimes be important reasons why we would have to reveal someone's name and address, even though they have asked for them not to be published. We would get in touch with the person and ask their views before we finally decided to reveal the information.

Background

In 2011, the Welsh Government commissioned the University of Edinburgh to examine the process of exclusion from schools in Wales, and the delivery, planning and commissioning of education provision for children and young people in education otherwise than at school (EOTAS) provision. The report identified that EOTAS provision, including the availability of places, the nature and the purpose of provision, was highly variable between authorities. There were issues with EOTAS provision across the sector, but in particular the quality of the curriculum available and difficulties in providing a full curriculum.

In 2014, the Children's Commissioner for Wales reported specifically on Pupil Referral Units (PRUs) in The Right to Learn. Perhaps of most concern was the Children's Commissioner's view that the situation in relation to PRUs had not improved in the six years since the office began gathering evidence on them. The report concluded that the provision of learning across PRUs is inconsistent and that, for some learners attending a PRU, it is actually having a negative impact on their wellbeing.

The 2013/14 Estyn Annual Report was published in January 2015, the report highlighted significant concerns regarding outcomes for learners accessing PRU provision. Inspection outcomes for PRUs varied greatly and, with the exception of a few PRUs, were generally worse than any other sector.

The weight of evidence in relation to EOTAS, and in particular PRUs, supports the need to develop a strategic approach to address failings, and to promote and disseminate the positives in the sector.

The EOTAS Task and Finish Group was established in September 2015 with the purpose of developing practical solutions to the recommendations of these reports. The Group was chaired by the former Estyn Chief Inspector Ann Keane and included representatives from the Welsh Government, local authorities, schools, PRUs, Estyn and the Office of the Children's Commissioner.

The work of the EOTAS Task and Finish Group was divided into two phases. The first focussed on PRUs; the second on wider EOTAS provision.

Through workshops held at PRU and EOTAS conferences six key areas for improvement were identified, these were:

Leadership;
Accountability;
Resources;
Structures;
Learner Wellbeing; and, Outcomes.

A series of proposals have been developed during the EOTAS Task and Finish Group's considerations, and in discussion with conference attendees, with these key areas in mind. For ease of reference, annex 1 contains a breakdown of the 34 proposed actions and which of the recommendations placed on the Welsh Government it seeks to address.

What is EOTAS?

EOTAS is education provision to meet specific needs of pupils who, for whatever reason, cannot attend a mainstream or special school. In law, local authorities are responsible for providing these services.

The existence of EOTAS provision is, in part, a response to exclusion from school. This might include formal disciplinary exclusion or a placement as an alternative to exclusion. EOTAS may also be used for reasons of health and safety where groups, such as pregnant young women, are not considered suitable for mainstream school education.

Children and young people in EOTAS, and in particular in PRUs, are some of the most vulnerable learners. They often come from chaotic and challenging backgrounds. They can frequently experience family breakdown and mental health issues, and are often exposed to substance misuse and domestic violence. It is no surprise therefore that these children and young people find themselves in negative patterns of behaviour which impacts on their learning and, as a result, have less than positive learning outcomes.

The Education Act 2002 and the Education and Skills Measure 2009 provide governing bodies with the power to commission external services. This power can be extended to services of an educational nature. The provisions in law are intended to enable governing bodies to fulfil their responsibilities with regard to 14-19 Learning Pathways. These services should only be used where the school is unable to meet the curricular needs of the learner i.e. by providing vocational or specialist subjects.

A number of schools have started commissioning services which are being referred to as 'Alternative Provision'. It is important to note that the term 'Alternative Provision' is not defined in Welsh law. The use of this term alongside EOTAS has caused confusion within the sector with regard to who maintains responsibility for the services being used.

It was never the policy intention of the Welsh Government that schools and their governing bodies commission their own EOTAS or 'Alternative Provision'.

The Welsh Government does recognise that this confusion is compounded by the use of the term 'Alternative Provision' within some non-statutory guidance. The EOTAS Delivery Group, established to oversee the implementation of the final agreed Framework for Action, has been tasked with reviewing this guidance and recommending revisions.

The Welsh Government does not consider it appropriate for schools to commission external provision for the purposes of addressing behavioural issues, for example, home tuition for school phobics or school refusers. This is set out in the Welsh Government's statutory guidance 'Exclusions from school and pupil referral units'.

The Framework for Action

Phased approach

Successive reports have indicated a need for national government to take a stronger by establishing national policies and procedures. However, as until now the Welsh Government has considered the organisation of EOTAS and PRUs to be a local matter, there is little available evidence regarding what policies and procedures are likely to improve accountability and learner outcomes when introduced on an all-Wales basis.

For this reason, Welsh Government believes a phased approach involving the development on non-statutory guidance and a catalogue of best practice options would provide local authorities with the necessary lead-in time to conduct any potential reorganisation before the consideration of any potential statutory requirements.

Before the non-statutory and statutory requirements can be established, short-term proposals focus on the need to expand the current evidence base and develop model policy options. In this way, the EOTAS Delivery Group can ensure that factors affecting the day to day implementation of national policies can be fully explored with the sector to ensure their effective delivery.

Key provisions

Stakeholder workshops held at the start of the Framework for Action development process identified some common requests for change within the sector across Wales. The change requests included encouraging the involvement of PRUs in collaborative working, improved information collection and sharing and greater stability in the structure and organisation for PRUs and other EOTAS providers.

This information, alongside the recommendations for Welsh Government, helped provide the basis for the inaugural EOTAS Task and Finish Group meeting; and the solutions developed by EOTAS Task and Finish Group in response form the key provisions within the Framework for Action.

EOTAS panels

A commonly held concern across the EOTAS sector is that the referral process for accessing EOTAS provision is not robust enough and inconsistent practice exists across Wales. On the whole, local authorities do not appear to have sufficient controls in place to ensure that learners accessing provision have been appropriately placed, and that all other interventions have been attempted by their mainstream school.

Some local authorities are already trying to introduce such controls by establishing EOTAS panels. These are panels consisting of key personnel i.e. Educational Psychologists, Education Welfare Officers, Inclusion Officers, Headteachers and Pupil Referral Unit (PRU) Teachers in Charge etc. which acts to fulfil a gatekeeping function to ensure the appropriateness of referrals and monitor placements.

Welsh Government and the EOTAS Task and Finish Group consider the establishment of EOTAS panels as a positive step to prevent vulnerable learners from being inappropriately placed in PRUs or other EOTAS provision. Welsh Government proposes to introduce guidance recommending that all local authorities that all local authorities adopt this practice; however Welsh Government also recognises that not enough evidence of what makes them successful currently exists so will be conducting analysis of existing EOTAS panels to help expand the evidence base.

Training for management committees

In February 2015 the regulations relating to management committees came into force. Although many PRUs had management committees in place prior to the regulations being introduced, not all did. Welsh Government has already committed to a review of the effectiveness of management committees, once the formal requirements have had the opportunity to bed in. The outcome of the review will help inform the long-term potential legislative work to raise the status and standards of PRUs.

Feedback from stakeholder conferences raised concerns relating to the training available to management committee members and regional consortia challenge advisors regarding the responsibilities of PRUs.

For example, management committee members are not given support and training equivalent to that offered to governing body members. As a result, management committees are not offering sufficient challenge and support to PRU staff and Teachers in Charge.

Although the current training modules offered to governing bodies would not be appropriate, due to them focussing on responsibilities not currently placed on management committee members, the support mechanisms and materials available to school governors could provide the template for extending support. This support could include handbooks for management committee members, access to information sharing networks and the development of PRU focussed training modules.

EOTAS commissioning frameworks

According to Estyn's report 'Education Other than at School' published in June 2016, some schools and local authorities are commissioning EOTAS services from private providers, unaware that they are operating unregistered, potentially illegal provision. To prevent this and to ensure that provision that meets the criteria becomes appropriately registered, the Welsh Government proposes a requirement for local authorities to establish commissioning frameworks for EOTAS services.

The commissioning framework will provide a set of guidelines for organisations seeking to provide EOTAS services to a local authority.

Any organisation seeking to provide EOTAS services to learners whose education is maintained by the local authority, will have a set of guidelines within the framework regarding the education, safeguarding and wellbeing responsibilities they will be expected to fulfil.

The local authority reporting to the EOTAS panel will be responsible for undertaking all necessary checks to ensure they are satisfied that the organisation has met their requirements. Once the local authority has undertaken these checks, the EOTAS panel can agree the organisation's 'approved' status. A database should be made available to all maintained schools within the local area.

Once an EOTAS provider has been entered onto the local authority's database as 'approved', the local authority will have a responsibility to regularly monitor the provision available to ensure that the quality of the provision available, and all necessary safeguarding precautions, remain suitable.

Local authorities will be asked to consider developing their commissioning frameworks on a regional basis. Doing so will help to better identify organisations that meet registration criteria, when cross-border placements are taken into consideration.

Schools and local authorities will be required to ensure that any referral to an EOTAS service is via an 'approved provider'. In all cases where EOTAS services are being engaged, the local authority is responsible for the provision and the EOTAS referral panel should be notified.

Data and information sharing

Welsh Government has already begun publishing attainment data for PRUs (Key Stage 4). This was initially released via the annual statistical release on performance by pupil characteristics in March 2016; this has now been extended to all EOTAS learners and become part of the main attainment statistical release published every autumn.

These changes were made by Welsh Government in response to the University of Edinburgh, Estyn and the EOTAS Task and Finish Group identifying the lack of clear accountability structures and mechanisms as one of the many areas for improvement in the EOTAS sector.

However, Welsh Government recognises the difficulties associated with comparing EOTAS learners with mainstream learners in a 'like for like' fashion. In practice, the majority of EOTAS learners do not start from the same baseline as mainstream learners and key performance indicators, such as Level 2 Inclusive, do not reflect the 'distance travelled' for EOTAS learners and the important work EOTAS staff undertake to address the often complex wellbeing needs faced by the vulnerable cohort.

With considerations regarding the future of Welsh Government data collection as part of 'Successful Futures' ongoing; the EOTAS Task and Finish Group agreed not to review what data should be collected and how it should be used.

Instead the EOTAS Task and Finish Group have focussed its discussions on how EOTAS and PRU data is collected and who should 'own' this data and therefore be accountable for outcomes. The discussions of the EOTAS Task and Finish Group have identified a need for more fundamental work relating to data collection. This includes ensuring all PRUs and maintained EOTAS settings have access to central information management systems and formalising daily information sharing procedures i.e. attendance recording.

Once the basics for data collection have been established, PRU and EOTAS settings will be better placed to review their outcomes and assess the needs of their provision and learners.

While this work is ongoing, the EOTAS Delivery Group will ensure that the needs and concerns of the EOTAS sector are reflected in the wider discussions taking place to develop and implement Successful Futures.

Wider education reforms/programmes

Successful Futures

Learners accessing EOTAS services should be able to reintegrate into mainstream schools, or transition into FE placements when appropriate, but this is unlikely to happen unless their educational needs are given a status equal to their pastoral or wellbeing needs. In view of the new flexibility being built into the reformed curriculum via the Successful Futures reform the ability for PRUS and other EOTAS settings to dis-apply the curriculum should be reviewed. The EOTAS Task and Finish Group propose that the removal of the ability to dis-apply the curriculum should be subject to consultation as part of the Framework for Action.

Welsh Government and the EOTAS Task and Finish Group recognise that one of the strengths of EOTAS lies in its flexibility. It is likely that there will be occasions, on an individual basis, where the disapplication of the curriculum is appropriate for a learner.

The EOTAS Task and Finish Group recommended option would be to remove the ability to 'blanket' dis-apply the curriculum. Instead the Welsh Government would seek to introduce tighter controls whereby the curriculum can be dis-applied based on individual learners rather than the setting.

One of the Key provisions of the Framework for Action is the establishment of access panels, the EOTAS Task and Finish Group considers that it would be the responsibility of the access panels to judge the suitability of a disapplication of the curriculum for an individual learner. The judgement should be reviewed periodically, with full and accurate records kept, which may be scrutinised by Estyn during inspection.

Collaboration and partnership working

The size and organisation of most PRUs (and other EOTAS services), makes it difficult to offer the full curriculum. In order to fulfil the requirements of the new curriculum it will be vital that PRUs and other EOTAS providers work in partnership with local schools and Further Education settings.

In order to provide a level of parity for EOTAS services, the EOTAS Task and Finish Group believes that EOTAS providers, PRUs in particular, should be included in the ongoing work to develop self-improving systems. This should be sought through brokering support from other agencies and sharing expertise and knowledge through strategic partnerships within regional consortia areas.

The Children's Commissioner's report 'Right to Learn' and feedback from the PRU conferences has indicated that many within the sector had underdeveloped networks with their local schools, local authority, regional consortium and even other local EOTAS providers.

As PRUs are, legally a type of mainstream school as well as a form of EOTAS provision, most PRUs should have existing pathways into their regional consortium. These pathways should be explored as a mechanism for fostering the collaborative and partnership working needed to enable PRUs to share and adopt good practice, within the 'Self-Improving

System' and meet the educational needs of vulnerable learners through the sharing of facilities and expertise.

However, the current National Model for Regional Working does provide for consortia involvement in 'wider' EOTAS provision i.e. non-PRU provision. To ensure a consistent approach within the EOTAS sector, the EOTAS Delivery Group would like to explore options for the inclusion of wider EOTAS provision within the remit of the National Model for Regional Working.

Consultation events

Welsh Government recognises that the proposed actions outlined here and within annex 1 represent the biggest reform of Welsh EOTAS and PRU policy.

We are keen to continue the collaborative approach to developing these proposals and so will provide opportunities to engage with representatives across the sector during the consultation process.

Details of these consultation events will be made available via the Welsh Government's consultation page and the Dysg newsletter in due course.

Responses

Specific questions are listed in the separate response form and you are invited to provide answers to these questions, or to comment in more general terms. This may be submitted electronically or in hard copy.
