Prevent duty

Like other public bodies, schools and childcare providers have a legal duty to 'have due regard to prevent people from being drawn in to terrorism'. We've explained what this means in our guidance for schools.

This legal duty is called the 'Prevent duty'. You can find more information about it in the Counter-Terrorism and Security Act 2015 and accompanying statutory guidance for public bodies.

Guidance for schools and childcare providers

Counter-extremism guidance

On 1 July 2015, we published advice on the Prevent duty. This document explains what schools and childcare providers can do to protect children and young people from the risk of radicalisation.

On 1 July 2015 we also published a guide to help schools understand the techniques terrorist groups use on social media.

On 2 September 2015, we shared links to more advice and resources that schools can use to protect their pupils from radicalisation. You will need to register with the TES website to access these resources.

We've also set up a helpline that schools and other organisations working with children can contact if they have concerns about radicalisation:

Fundamental British values

We believe an education that promotes fundamental British values will give young people the ability to challenge and resist the influence of extremist views.

In November 2014, we published guidance on promoting British values for:

- local-authority-maintained schools
- independent schools, including academies and free schools

Safeguarding

We've also issued safeguarding principles for schools and other organisations who work with children. This includes protecting children from radicalisation.

Read the statutory guidance 'Keeping children safe in education' and 'Working together to safeguard children' for more information.

Inspections of schools and childcare providers

From September 2015, Ofsted inspections assess the arrangements schools have in place to promote pupils' welfare and prevent radicalisation and extremism. Read Ofsted's common inspection framework for more information.
