September 2015: curriculum and qualifications

We introduced reformed GCSEs in English literature, English language and mathematics for first teaching in September 2015.

The first exams will be in summer 2017. They are the only

↑Contents

English and mathematics GCSEs that will count in the key stage 4 performance tables in 2017. Grading scores will range from 9 to 1.

2016 is the last year that current:

- English language GCSEs
- English literature GCSEs
- English (combined) GCSEs
- mathematics GCSEs
- level 1 and level 2 certificates in these subjects (sometimes known as IGCSEs) will count in the key stage 4 performance tables. The last exams in existing GCSEs graded A* to G in these subjects will be in summer 2016, with a single opportunity for retakes in the autumn. Schools should prepare for the second wave of new GCSEs starting in September 2016. Grading scores will range from 9 to 1. Ofqual is currently accrediting these qualifications, and awarding organisations will publish accredited specifications in these subjects in due course. Further information on GCSEs, AS levels and A levels accredited for September 2016 is available.

UPDATED

January 2016: curriculum and qualifications

We plan to introduce English Baccalaureate subjects at GCSE for pupils currently in year 7. We have an open consultation on this proposal and would like your views. The consultation closes on 29 January 2016. The government will publish its response later in the spring term in 2016.
