> Inspection and performance of schools > Inspecting teaching of the protected characteristics in schools

Coronavirus (COVID-19) | Guidance and support Home > Education, training and skills > Inspections and performance of education providers raising standards improving lives how to live alongside, and show respect for, a diverse range of people. When we inspect schools, we assess how well they equip children to do this. Some schools have raised questions about what they should teach in relation to the 'protected characteristics' in the Equality Act 2010, particularly the sexual orientation and gender reassignment characteristics.

This page explains Ofsted's approach on inspection to evaluating how schools go about meeting their duties. It applies to all types of academy, maintained, non-maintained special and non-association independent schools, except that part 5 below on the independent school standards (ISS) is only relevant to nonassociation independent schools. Any reference to 'teaching' on this page includes providing pupils with opportunities to learn. The Public Sector Equality Duty in section 149 of the Equality Act 2010 requires Ofsted, when exercising all our functions, to have due regard to the need to:

Background

No matter what type of school they attend, it is important that all children leave with an understanding of the world they are growing up in, having learned

• eliminate discrimination, harassment, victimisation and any other conduct that is prohibited by or under the Equality Act 2010 • advance equality of opportunity between persons who share a relevant protected characteristic and persons who do not share it foster good relations between persons who share a relevant protected characteristic and persons who do not share it We have taken this into account in this page. How we inspect teaching of the Inspectors will gather evidence on how schools promote equality and pupils' understanding of the protected characteristics. They will use this evidence as part of evaluating and coming to judgements on 3 main areas: • the personal development of pupils protected characteristics in schools the effectiveness of leadership and management: from the start of the summer term 2021, how the school meets the requirements of the Department for Education (DfE)'s statutory guidance on relationships education, relationships and sex education and health education ('the DfE's statutory guidance') will contribute to this

• for non-association independent schools, whether the school meets the independent school standards (ISS); this also informs the judgement about and independent school inspection handbook explain that pupils' the effectiveness of its leadership and management protected characteristics, they will always report on this and will explain how (if at all) it has affected the school's inspection judgements.

If inspectors identify at inspection that a school is not teaching about all the Personal development The education inspection framework (EIF) and the school inspection handbook understanding of the protected characteristics and how equality and diversity are promoted form part of the evidence that inspectors use to evaluate the school's personal development of pupils. All primary and secondary schools, whether state-funded or independent, should be able to demonstrate that no form of discrimination is tolerated and that pupils show respect for those who share the protected characteristics. Schools will not be able to demonstrate this by pointing to a general policy of encouraging respect for all people.

Schools are not required to teach about all the protected characteristics in every year group; that is a matter for the school to decide, and how it plans its curriculum. However, the curriculum should be planned and delivered so that children develop age-appropriate knowledge and understanding during their time at the school. In secondary schools, this includes age-appropriate knowledge of the protected characteristics of sexual orientation and gender reassignment.

There are a range of ways schools can choose to teach about these issues in an age-appropriate way. Primary schools could, for example, teach pupils about the different types of family groups that exist within society. Secondary schools could, for example, teach pupils in more detail about sexuality and gender identity as well as the legal rights afforded to LGBT people. As stated in the DfE's statutory guidance, teaching on these matters should be integrated appropriately into the curriculum, rather than addressed separately or in oneoff lessons.

If a school does not promote pupils' awareness and understanding of all the improvement' judgement for personal development, particularly if inspectors provision for pupils' personal development. For state-funded schools, this only applies to section 5 inspections. For independent schools, this only applies to have carried out to meet the requirements in the DfE's statutory guidance.

standard inspections. This is regardless of any consultation that the school may identify one or more other weaknesses in the school's promotion of and protected characteristics effectively, this may result in a 'requires Inspections where there is no personal development judgement On a section 8 inspection of a state-funded school, inspectors do not give a judgement for personal development. If they find evidence that the school does not promote pupils' awareness and understanding of all the protected characteristics effectively, they may recommend that the school's next inspection be a section 5 inspection.

inspectors also do not give a judgement for personal development. When it is in scope of the DfE's commission for that inspection and inspectors find evidence that the school does not promote pupils' awareness and understanding of all the protected characteristics effectively, they will take account of this in their commission, inspectors will follow the guidance set out in the handbook on Leadership and management and the

From 1 September 2020, relationships education is compulsory for all primary school pupils and relationships and sex education (RSE) is compulsory for all secondary school pupils. However, due to the partial closure of schools during the COVID-19 pandemic, the DfE has announced that schools 'have flexibility

• 'that are ready to teach these subjects and have met the requirements set over how they discharge their duty within the first year of compulsory teaching'.

checking standards beyond the scope of the DfE's commission.

DfE's statutory guidance

It has stated that schools:

curriculum in the future'

2021' handled

content

statutory RSE

inspection

inspection.

inspection

Primary schools

safeguarding arrangements.

safeguarding arrangements.

than requires improvement.

Section 8 inspections inspection be a section 5 inspection.

Additional inspections they:

judgements about whether the ISS are met. When it is out of scope of the DfE's

On an additional inspection of a non-association independent school, out in the statutory guidance, including those relating to engagement with parents and carers, are encouraged to begin delivering teaching from 1 September 2020, or whenever is practicable to do so within the first few weeks of the new school year' • 'that are not ready to teach the new subjects, or are unable to adequately meet the requirements because of the challenging circumstances, should aim to start preparations to deliver the new curriculum as soon as possible and start teaching the new content by at least the start of the summer term that are unable to start teaching the new subjects until the start of the summer term 2021, 'will need to decide how much of the content they will be able to cover. They should still be able to show how they will cover the whole

The DfE's statutory guidance contains information on what schools should do parts of the DfE's statutory guidance that state they should (or should not) do relationships education, RSE and health education. If schools do not follow and sets out the requirements they must comply with when teaching something, they will need to have good reasons for this.

Requirements in the DfE's statutory guidance The DfE's statutory guidance requires that all schools must:

• have an up-to-date policy, which is made available to parents and others and

• take into account the age and religious background of all pupils and ensure that their teaching is appropriate to their age and religious background, to ensure that the topics outlined in the statutory guidance are appropriately

• comply with the relevant provisions of the Equality Act 2010, including that must not unlawfully discriminate against pupils by treating them less favourably because they have one or more of the protected characteristics

• must make reasonable adjustments to alleviate disadvantage, for example by taking positive action to deal with particular disadvantages affecting a group because of a protected characteristic. The statutory guidance gives the example of taking positive action to support girls if there is evidence that they are being disproportionately subjected to sexual harassment

• make relationships education and/or RSE accessible for all pupils, including

• ensure that teaching reflects the law (including the Equality Act 2010) as it

• ensure that the needs of all pupils are appropriately met, and all pupils ensure that teaching is sensitive and age-appropriate in approach and work closely with parents in all cases when planning and delivering the subjects, ensuring that parents know what will be taught and when, and child be withdrawn from some or all of sex education delivered as part of The DfE expects secondary schools, state-funded or independent, to deliver

We are currently carrying out a phased return to inspection, starting with an

In additional inspections carried out to independent schools during the interim period, inspectors will normally only talk to schools about their readiness to comply with the DfE's statutory guidance, and comment on this in the inspection report, when it is in scope of the DfE's commission for the

How this applies when we return to routine teaching on LGBT relationships and encourages primary schools to do so.

clearly communicate the fact that parents have the right to request that the applies to relationships, so that young people clearly understand what the consult parents in developing and reviewing that policy in all cases law allows and does not allow, and the wider implications of decisions they may make ensure that the materials used to support teaching are appropriate for the age and maturity of pupils and sensitive to their needs understand the importance of equality and respect those with special educational needs and disabilities

In interim visits to state-funded schools, we will not specifically explore the school's readiness to comply with the DfE's statutory guidance. However, if the school chooses to discuss this with inspectors, we may comment on this in the interim period of visits from 1 September 2020.

letter published after the visit.

How this applies during our phased return to

We intend to resume full inspections in January 2021, but are keeping the timing under review. When full inspections of state-funded and independent schools resume, inspectors will assess the school's readiness to comply with the DfE's statutory guidance, and comment on this in the inspection report.

However, a school's compliance with the statutory requirements will not

Before the start of summer term 2021, if a primary school does not teach about LGBT relationships, and does not yet have adequate plans in place to meet the requirements of the DfE's statutory guidance by the start of the summer term before then), inspectors will comment on this in the inspection report. This will 2021 (for example, if it has not consulted parents and has no plans to do so not, however, impact on the leadership and management judgement except

From the start of summer term 2021, if a primary school does not teach about management judgement as long as the school can satisfy inspectors that it has this, for example if it has failed to consult with parents, inspectors will consider this when making the leadership and management judgement. The school will

Before the start of summer term 2021, if a secondary school does not teach about LGBT relationships and does not have adequate plans in place to meet the requirements of the DfE's statutory guidance by the start of the summer term 2021, inspectors will comment on this in the inspection report. This will not, however, impact on the leadership and management judgement except when inspectors consider it relevant to the effectiveness of the school's

From the start of summer term 2021, if a secondary school does not teach about LGBT relationships, it will not be meeting the requirements of the DfE's statutory guidance. Inspectors will consider this when making the leadership section 5 inspections. For independent schools, this only applies to standard inspections. The school will not ordinarily receive a judgement for this better

On a section 8 inspection of a state-funded school, inspectors do not give a judgement for leadership and management. From the start of summer term of the DfE's statutory guidance, they may recommend that the school's next

On an additional inspection, from the start of summer term 2021, if it is in set out in the handbook on checking standards beyond the scope of the DfE's

There are 2 paragraphs in the ISS that expressly require independent schools

• Paragraph 2(2)(d)(ii) requires proprietors to provide a: 'personal, social, health and economic education which... encourages respect for other people, paying particular regard to the protected characteristics set out in • Paragraph 5(b)(vi) requires proprietors to 'ensure that principles are actively promoted which... encourage respect for other people, paying particular regard to the protected characteristics set out in the 2010 [Equality] Act'

The DfE's non-statutory guidance on the ISS contains further information for schools on meeting the above requirements. This sets out that schools must

If an independent secondary school does not teach about LGBT relationships,

Before the start of summer term 2021, if an independent primary school does not teach about LGBT relationships, it will not automatically be judged to fail the ISS listed above, provided that it can satisfy inspectors that it has plans in term 2021. If it cannot do this (for example, if it has not consulted parents and will normally judge that the school has failed to meet the ISS above. Under the has no plans to do so before the start of the summer term 2021), inspectors

From the start of summer term 2021, if an independent primary school does not teach about LGBT relationships, it will not automatically be judged to fail fulfilled the requirements of the DfE's statutory guidance. If it cannot do this, judge that the school has failed to meet the ISS above. Under the EIF, this non-compliance consequently means it will not ordinarily receive a leadership and the ISS listed above, provided that it can satisfy inspectors that it has still for example if it has failed to consult with parents, inspectors will normally

Schools are at liberty to teach the tenets of any faith on the protected characteristics. For example, they may explain that same-sex relationships and gender reassignment are not permitted by a particular religion. However, if they Is there anything wrong with this page?

Check the new rules for January 2021

Departments and policy

How government works do so, they must also explain the legal rights LGBT people have under UK law, EIF, non-compliance with the standards normally means a school will not receive a leadership and management judgement better than requires place to meet the requirements of the guidance by the start of the summer it will fail to meet the ISS listed above. This failure means the school will not ordinarily receive a leadership and management judgement better than make pupils aware of the protected characteristics to the extent that it is Independent school standards to encourage respect for the protected characteristics:

2021, if inspectors find evidence that a school is not meeting the requirements and management judgement. For state-funded schools, this only applies to still fulfilled the requirements of the DfE's statutory guidance. If it cannot do when inspectors consider it relevant to the effectiveness of the school's LGBT relationships, this will not have an impact on the leadership and impact inspection judgements until the start of the summer term 2021.

not ordinarily receive a judgement for this better than requires improvement. Secondary schools scope of the DfE's commission for the inspection, and inspectors find evidence that a school is not meeting the requirements of the DfE's statutory guidance, they will take this into account in their judgements about whether the ISS are met. If it is out of scope of the commission, inspectors will follow the guidance the 2010 [Equality] Act.'

considered age-appropriate to do so.

requires improvement.

improvement.

commission.

Faith teachings on protected characteristics management better than requires improvement.

Coronavirus (COVID-19) The UK has left the EU and that this and LGBT people must be respected.

Employing people Departments Worldwide Environment and countryside Housing and local services Services Money and tax Passports, travel and living abroad Visas and immigration Working, jobs and pensions

Childcare and parenting Citizenship and living in the UK Guidance and regulation News and communications Crime, justice and the law Research and statistics Disabled people Driving and transport Policy papers and consultations Transparency and freedom of information releases

Education and learning

Help Privacy Cookies Contact Accessibility statement Terms and conditions Rhestr o Wasanaethau Cymraeg Built by the Government Digital Service All content is available under the Open Government Licence v3.0, except where otherwise stated © Crown copyright

Guidance Contents Background

Inspecting teaching of the protected characteristics in schools Published 17 September 2020

How we inspect teaching of the protected characteristics in schools Personal development Leadership and management and the DfE's statutory guidance Independent school standards

Coronavirus (COVID-19): guidance and support

Is this page useful?

Yes

No

Services and information Benefits Births, deaths, marriages and care Business and self-employed