Social worker visits
Children and families may feel anxious about infection risks. Where this is the case and services need to adapt to ensure social distancing measures, you should explain why it is essential that they have access to the home, or that the child is seen outside the home. Where a child is looked after, the child should be fully informed and consulted about the arrangements to meet the intended purpose of the visit whether that is safeguarding or promotion of the child's welfare.
Social workers should consider the risks to the child and family and the risks to others, as well as disabled children, who may not have verbal communication abilities.
It is also important to note that existing general duties as Local Authorities under the Children Act 1989 to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in need in their area, and to take reasonable steps to provide services, remain in force. It is also the case for duties under section 47 of the same Act as regards undertaking enquiries where they have reasonable cause to suspect a child is suffering or likely to suffer significant harm.
There may, of course, be other reasons why families may refuse access. These should be explored with them. Where you have concerns about non-engagement or serious harm, local authorities should follow the immediate child protection procedures set out in Working Together to Safeguard Children.
Children Act 1989 representations - continuing effect of the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020
Where a representation about the representations procedure under regulation 17 of the Children Act 1989 (Representations Procedure) Regulations 2006 is made by a child looked after, a person representing the child, or a former relevant child, the local authority concerned with the outcome they continue to be able to request a review panel within the timescales set out in regulation 24 of the Children Act 1989 (Representations Procedure) Regulations 2006.
- the local authority can still convene a review panel within the statutory time frame of 30 working days or as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter
- the review panel can still send its report to local authorities within the statutory time frame of 5 working days or as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter
- the local authority, together with an independent person, can still consider the report of the review panel within 20 working days of receipt of the report in response to the representations and the panel's report or as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter

If the local authority is the subject of the complaint, representations to the 20 September 2020. The complainant, local authority and review panel must continue to comply with regulations 17 and 18 of the Children Act 1989 Regulations 2006 (Representations Procedure) Regulations 2006.
Advocacy support for looked after children
The ongoing provision of advocacy services to children looked after is a statutory requirement under the Children Act 1989 Representations Procedure (England) Regulations 2006. The DfE-funded Always Heard safety net service continues to be fully operational during the COVID-19 outbreak. Children can contact Coram4Children's Help at Hand service also available on 0800 538 0731.
Support for children who have a social worker
Safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children and young people is critically important. For many parents, carers and children, access to support, including from social workers, is essential. Social workers should continue working as they do now, with visits taking place where necessary, to support children and families supported. Multi-agency support should continue, with professionals working together to meet the needs of children and their families, as they do now. Where face to face contact is not possible, this is supported.
Local authorities should continue to provide children who have a social worker, plus those with support available to them and families and to invest resources on a risk-assessed basis, ensuring that the most vulnerable children and families receive the continuity and consistency of support.
Responsibilities for missing children
Local authorities have a statutory duty under Section 47 of the Children Act 1989 to undertake enquiries where they have reasonable cause to suspect that a child in their area is suffering, or is likely to suffer, significant harm. This duty should be fulfilled in accordance with the statutory guidance set out in Working Together to Safeguard Children.
Responsibilities to missing children and children at risk of going missing remain unchanged and we expect local authorities to use their judgement on a case by case basis as to how they can best support children who go missing. The statutory guidance on children who run away or go missing from home or care remains in force.
Local authorities should continue to refer to the statutory guidance on the role of unaccompanied asylum children and child victims of modern slavery regarding action to be taken in relation to unaccompanied asylum children.
Educational Setting
Vulnerable children attendance at educational settings
It is mandatory for all children to attend school from the beginning of the autumn term. This includes children who are vulnerable, including:
- parents' duty to ensure that their child attends regularly at school where the child is of compulsory school age and a registered pupil at school
- schools' responsibilities to record attendance and follow up absence
- local authorities' duty to enforce parents' legal responsibility where a child does not attend school regularly

We have also published guidance on improving school attendance, support for those with special needs and vulnerable children, and on the reporting attendance and school meals functions in the autumn census.
This guidance sets out expectations on social workers and family support professionals working with children and families. It is for those who commission, manage or provide services, including those working in universities and voluntary organisations. It is designed to help them understand their responsibilities to safeguard and promote the welfare of children and young people, and to help them work together to provide children with the best possible support.
Social workers should be in communication with schools and, where possible, encouraged to reduce the risk of exclusion.
We have removed the requirement for schools to, so far as possible, avoid permanently excluding any vulnerable children while schools are fully open. Exclusion of Looked After Children, a looked after child is at risk of exclusion, the SDS should, as far as possible, avoid excluding them permanently and should consider all the other options open to them, such as a fixed period exclusion, providing the behaviour and present the need for exclusion, and make any additional arrangements to support the child. This includes providing suitable full-time education for the duration of the exclusion.
Where a child has been permanently excluded, this will include rapidly securing a new school placement. Schools should also consider using a Personal Education Plan (PEP). Where a school has concerns about the behaviour of a previously looked after child, it should, as far as possible, avoid excluding them and seek support from the virtual school head for the child's previous school.
The fees of exclusion for education and childcare, summarised in annex 3 of the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents. The Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents is that education and childcare provision should continue as normal. The guidance sets out expectations for schools and childcare providers to support children and young people's education and their social and emotional development.
Risk assessments for children and young people with an education, health and care plan
Following the March closure of schools and colleges to most pupils and students, local authorities and providers should review all education, health and care assessments for children and young people with EHC plans. This was a temporary measure.
Local authorities and educational settings should make their own judgements about how to prioritise the review of EHC plans and the carrying out of new assessments, in light of the circumstances they are facing locally.
- help identify any additional support that pupils need in order to make a successful return to school
- to help reassess pupils, families, and staff that it is safe for the pupil to be in school, and to identify any additional measures that need to be put in place

Where a child or young person with an education, health and care (EHC) plan is unable to attend school, the local authority should continue to secure the provision specified in the EHC plan, where it is practicable to do so and where it is in place proportionate control measures.
All settings should continue to work with the system of controls, outlined in the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents, that help them reach each control to the fullest extent possible, in a way that is proportionate to the risk in their circumstances and the needs of their cohort.
Alternative provision (AP) schools and providers
AP settings should continue to operate. The system of controls, outlined in the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents, that help them reach each control to the fullest extent possible, in a way that is proportionate to the risk in their circumstances and the needs of their cohort.
Multi-agency
Multi-agency child protection conferences
Local authorities, other safeguarding partners and registered services no longer have a statutory duty to convene child protection conferences but are consistent with social distancing requirements and restrictions in the future.
Multi-agency working is essential to the safeguarding and promotion of the welfare of children, and multi-agency child protection conferences should, therefore, go ahead where they can be safely held. Local authorities should work with their safeguarding partners and other relevant agencies to ensure that information sharing and joint risk assessment continues to be effective.
Child protection conferences and multi-agency child risk assessments for children who are subject to a child protection plan should be held within the usual timescales. Where this is not possible, where the multi-agency meeting will need to be done differently during this period, within the framework set out in law and guidance, local authorities should work with their safeguarding partners to put in place clear and transparent protocols and risk assessments.
Child in need meetings
Child protection reviews

This guidance is about safeguarding and protecting the welfare of vulnerable children and young people during the coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak. It sets out how children's social care services and providers to work with children and families during the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic.

Information for providers of non-residential respite services (such as holiday clubs) is set out in guidance on supporting vulnerable children and young people, measures for out of school settings during the coronavirus \(COVID-19\) outbreak, and actions for early years and childcare providers during the coronavirus \(COVID-19\) outbreak.

Everyone involved in promoting the welfare, protection and care of children is working in challenging circumstances. We recognise the pressures you are under and must vulnerable during this period. We recognise that the children's social care workforce is critical to the effective delivery of this guidance. We will do all we can to support you in your work, including through the children's social care workforce providing a vital service during this time.

We have published guidance on the accommodation of those who are working to protect vulnerable children. Two key challenges that they have been told to address are to:

- ensure the wellbeing of the workforce
- continue to protect the safeguarding, and protect the welfare, of children across society, which we know prompted heightened levels of risk for some children. This is set out in the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents.

Local authorities should:

- continue to prioritise the safeguarding, and protect the welfare, of children across society
- maintain delivery of children's social care during the recovery stage of the coronavirus (COVID-19)
- ensure that children's social care services are delivered in a way that public health measures may act as a barrier, for example as a result of local restrictions

This guidance should be used to support children's social care services and providers in their response to the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic. It should be read alongside the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents. decision making and day to day practice with children and families. It also supplements existing guidance and regulations which remain in force during this period.

Main changes to previous guidance

We have updated this guidance to:

- reflect the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020 have expired
- reflect the Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) (No. 2) (England) (Amendment) (No. 4) Regulations 2020 - the rule of 6

Principles

The difficult and complex decisions that need to be taken during this period should be made in the spirit of the following principles:

- children and their families must be supported in a way that is as normal as possible, including through continuing to provide services that support the best possible quality and effective support as soon as help is identified
- family-focused - harnessing the strengths in families and their communities
- ensuring children and families are listened to and their views taken into account
- providing practical support to reduce stress and the risk of family breakdown
- transparent - providing clarity and maintaining professional curiosity about a child's circumstances

Duties in primary legislation are unchanged

The duties to run most vulnerable children that are set out in primary legislation remain unchanged. The duties in the Children Act 1989 as amended by the Adoption and Children Act 2002 and section 7 of the Children Act 2004 remain in force. The Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020 with these duties. The temporary regulations that made changes came into force on 26 September. The temporary regulations, which were made under the Coronavirus Act 2020, have now expired. The temporary regulations will continue to provide some flexibility in relation to three areas. Local authorities should continue to work as they did before the temporary regulations and continue to apply the duties in relation to:

- adoption suitability assessments
- looked after reviews and meetings
- private fostering notifications
- Children Act 1989 representations

Important dates

The regulations will remain in force until the regulatory changes expire on 31 March 2021.

Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020

As part of the response to coronavirus (COVID-19), the government carefully considered the flexibilities needed to support the effective delivery of adoption and special guardianship services. The Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020 came into force on 24 April 2020.

The Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) (No.2) Regulations 2020 on 26 September. The temporary regulations, which were made under the Coronavirus Act 2020, have now expired. The temporary regulations will continue to provide some flexibility in relation to three areas. Local authorities should continue to work as they did before the temporary regulations and continue to apply the duties in relation to:

- adoption suitability assessments
- looked after reviews and meetings
- private fostering notifications
- Volume 5 - Children Act 1989 representations

Temporary regulations

The Adoption and Children \(Coronavirus\) \(Amendment\) \(No.2\) Regulations 2020 the temporary regulations' (temporary) amend a series of 6 regulations:

The temporary regulations:

- allow visits to take place over the telephone, a video link or other electronic communication, rather than in person, in order to support social distancing in the coronavirus (COVID-19)
- change the rules regarding health assessment in the process for approval as an adoption agency, so that a medical adviser is not required to be consulted and a registered medical practitioner
- suspend the minimum frequency of Ofsted inspections, recognising that resources and visits will be prioritised to where they are most needed

The temporary regulations are intended to be used where the flexibilities are necessary to enable the effective delivery of services, and where it is not reasonably practicable to do so in accordance with the usual rules.

It would be contrary to any guidance relating to the incidence or transmission of coronavirus (COVID-19) in England (the "Public Health Guidance") or to the measures available for the purpose of dealing with the incidence or transmission of coronavirus (COVID-19) in England.

The overarching approach to making use of these legislative flexibilities should include:

- assurance at chair-office level to local authorities and, where appropriate, has been undertaken to ensure that the child's welfare is safeguarded
- a steps recording the steps taken by the local authority to bring to and communicating to the other safeguarding partners and providers
- a review of the child's circumstances at the earliest opportunity after a flexibility

Ofsted will take note of any use of these flexibilities, or providers should be prepared to explain their use and how they were satisfied that it was in the best interests of the child.

The Secretary of State has agreed that Ofsted will undertake assurance visits in relation to the use of the temporary regulations. Ofsted will also continue to undertake focused visits to children's social care services and will undertake full inspection timescales for these settings will remain suspended until April 2021.

The temporary regulations do not extend to the Welsh Ministers and the Education and Barring Services (DBS) have put temporary arrangements in place, to support the recruitment of social workers and the temporary suspension of the ability of the DBS and Disclosure Scotland to issue certificates. The children's social care workforce in England and Wales, being included in Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents and the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents.

Children's social care

Social work practice

There should be no blanket changes to social work practice, but coronavirus (COVID-19) should be reflected and risk assessed in how practice is delivered. The different ways of working which should always be risk-assessed. Practice guidance for children and adult social care workers and the social care guidance and PPE guidance for social care settings.

Within any restrictions on social distancing and contact, local authorities will continue to undertake assessments of children's needs and provide support to meet eligible children and families. Where support networks can provide an important source of support, local authorities should work with them to support the broader framework set out in government guidance on social distancing.

Coronavirus (COVID-19) testing for children's social care workers

Children's social care workers are eligible for coronavirus (COVID-19) testing. They can be tested if they have symptoms so that they know how to self-isolate and get a test. Testing is also available for those who do not have symptoms but are critical to the running of essential services, such as those in health and social care, and do so as soon as they have a confirmed case or an outbreak in their workplace. You can find out more about testing arrangements in the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents testing for coronavirus website or ordered by telephone via NHS 119.

Settings must take all reasonable steps to ensure that anyone who has symptoms has attended has booked a test for coronavirus \(COVID-19\). Based on the results of the test, they will be told how long they need to stay away from the setting. Settings should not request evidence of negative test results or other medical evidence before allowing a child to return to school. Settings should not request evidence of negative test results or other medical evidence before allowing a child to return to school.

Virtual visits - local authorities

The temporary regulations allow visits to a looked after child, as required by the Care Planning, Placement and Case Review (England) Regulations 2010, to be carried out over the telephone, a video link or other electronic communication.

The use of virtual visits should be the exception rather than the norm and only where it is not reasonably practicable to undertake a face to face visit. Face to face visit alternatives are necessary during the coronavirus (COVID-19). This could include in the event of local restrictions, shielding or self-isolation of the child, their family or their social worker.

A looked after child's circumstances and wishes and feelings must be fully ascertained and is not possible and be advised of their right to advocacy or support.

This does not provide exemption from the duty to visit a looked after child. Wherever possible, visits should be held face-to-face. This can include arrangements for visits to be held outside the home, for example in a garden, within the statutory timescales.

The temporary regulations require any virtual visits to be held in accordance with any reasonable instructions from the child's parents, unless the local authority considers that:

- the wishes of the children and young people affected
- the ability of the child, young person and parent to engage in virtual visit due to reasons such as their age, disability, learning difficulty or use of English, for example, and the availability of an interpreter
- whether there is an identified need for a face-to-face visit to ascertain the child or young person
- any other factors to be considered effective this relevant

All cases of this temporary flexibility must be recorded in individual case files and the reasons why the local authority considered it was not reasonably practicable to undertake a face to face visit. Local authorities, children's social workers and workers should consider available guidance on the use of virtual visits and the issues that could be addressed.

Social worker visits

Children and families may feel anxious about infection risks. Where this is the case and services need to adapt to ensure social distancing measures, you should explain why it is essential that they have access to the home, or that the child is seen outside the home. Where a child is looked after, the child should be fully informed and consulted about the arrangements to meet the intended purpose of the visit whether that is safeguarding or promotion of the child's welfare.

Social workers should consider the risks to the child and family and the risks to others, as well as disabled children, who may not have verbal communication abilities.

It is also important to note that existing general duties as Local Authorities under the Children Act 1989 to safeguard and promote the welfare of children in need in their area, and to take reasonable steps to provide services, remain in force. It is also the case for duties under section 47 of the same Act as regards undertaking enquiries where they have reasonable cause to suspect a child is suffering or likely to suffer significant harm.

There may, of course, be other reasons why families may refuse access. These should be explored with them. Where you have concerns about non-engagement or serious harm, local authorities should follow the immediate child protection procedures set out in Working Together to Safeguard Children.

Children Act 1989 representations - continuing effect of the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020

Where a representation about the representations procedure under regulation 17 of the Children Act 1989 (Representations Procedure) Regulations 2006 is made by a child looked after, a person representing the child, or a former relevant child, the local authority concerned with the outcome they continue to be able to request a review panel within the timescales set out in regulation 24 of the Children Act 1989 (Representations Procedure) Regulations 2006.

- the local authority can still convene a review panel within the statutory time frame of 30 working days or as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter
- the review panel can still send its report to local authorities within the statutory time frame of 5 working days or as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter
- the local authority, together with an independent person, can still consider the report of the review panel within 20 working days of receipt of the report in response to the representations and the panel's report or as soon as reasonably practicable thereafter

If the local authority is the subject of the complaint, representations to the 20 September 2020. The complainant, local authority and review panel must continue to comply with regulations 17 and 18 of the Children Act 1989 Regulations 2006 (Representations Procedure) Regulations 2006.

Advocacy support for looked after children

The ongoing provision of advocacy services to children looked after is a statutory requirement under the Children Act 1989 Representations Procedure (England) Regulations 2006. The DfE-funded Always Heard safety net service continues to be fully operational during the COVID-19 outbreak. Children can contact Coram4Children's Help at Hand service also available on 0800 538 0731.

Support for children who have a social worker

Safeguarding and promoting the welfare of children and young people is critically important. For many parents, carers and children, access to support, including from social workers, is essential. Social workers should continue working as they do now, with visits taking place where necessary, to support children and families supported. Multi-agency support should continue, with professionals working together to meet the needs of children and their families, as they do now. Where face to face contact is not possible, this is supported.

Local authorities should continue to provide children who have a social worker, plus those with support available to them and families and to invest resources on a risk-assessed basis, ensuring that the most vulnerable children and families receive the continuity and consistency of support.

Responsibilities for missing children

Local authorities have a statutory duty under Section 47 of the Children Act 1989 to undertake enquiries where they have reasonable cause to suspect that a child in their area is suffering, or is likely to suffer, significant harm. This duty should be fulfilled in accordance with the statutory guidance set out in Working Together to Safeguard Children.

Responsibilities to missing children and children at risk of going missing remain unchanged and we expect local authorities to use their judgement on a case by case basis as to how they can best support children who go missing. The statutory guidance on children who run away or go missing from home or care remains in force.

Local authorities should continue to refer to the statutory guidance on the role of unaccompanied asylum children and child victims of modern slavery regarding action to be taken in relation to unaccompanied asylum children.

Educational Setting

Vulnerable children attendance at educational settings

It is mandatory for all children to attend school from the beginning of the autumn term. This includes children who are vulnerable, including:

- parents' duty to ensure that their child attends regularly at school where the child is of compulsory school age and a registered pupil at school
- schools' responsibilities to record attendance and follow up absence
- local authorities' duty to enforce parents' legal responsibility where a child does not attend school regularly

We have also published guidance on improving school attendance, support for those with special needs and vulnerable children, and on the reporting attendance and school meals functions in the autumn census.

This guidance sets out expectations on social workers and family support professionals working with children and families. It is for those who commission, manage or provide services, including those working in universities and voluntary organisations. It is designed to help them understand their responsibilities to safeguard and promote the welfare of children and young people, and to help them work together to provide children with the best possible support.

Social workers should be in communication with schools and, where possible, encouraged to reduce the risk of exclusion.

We have removed the requirement for schools to, so far as possible, avoid permanently excluding any vulnerable children while schools are fully open. Exclusion of Looked After Children, a looked after child is at risk of exclusion, the SDS should, as far as possible, avoid excluding them permanently and should consider all the other options open to them, such as a fixed period exclusion, providing the behaviour and present the need for exclusion, and make any additional arrangements to support the child. This includes providing suitable full-time education for the duration of the exclusion.

Where a child has been permanently excluded, this will include rapidly securing a new school placement. Schools should also consider using a Personal Education Plan (PEP). Where a school has concerns about the behaviour of a previously looked after child, it should, as far as possible, avoid excluding them and seek support from the virtual school head for the child's previous school.

The fees of exclusion for education and childcare, summarised in annex 3 of the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents. The Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents is that education and childcare provision should continue as normal. The guidance sets out expectations for schools and childcare providers to support children and young people's education and their social and emotional development.

Risk assessments for children and young people with an education, health and care plan

Following the March closure of schools and colleges to most pupils and students, local authorities and providers should review all education, health and care assessments for children and young people with EHC plans. This was a temporary measure.

Local authorities and educational settings should make their own judgements about how to prioritise the review of EHC plans and the carrying out of new assessments, in light of the circumstances they are facing locally.

- help identify any additional support that pupils need in order to make a successful return to school
- to help reassess pupils, families, and staff that it is safe for the pupil to be in school, and to identify any additional measures that need to be put in place

Where a child or young person with an education, health and care (EHC) plan is unable to attend school, the local authority should continue to secure the provision specified in the EHC plan, where it is practicable to do so and where it is in place proportionate control measures.

All settings should continue to work with the system of controls, outlined in the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents, that help them reach each control to the fullest extent possible, in a way that is proportionate to the risk in their circumstances and the needs of their cohort.

Alternative provision (AP) schools and providers

AP settings should continue to operate. The system of controls, outlined in the Coronavirus \(COVID-19\): guidance for schools, childcare providers and parents, that help them reach each control to the fullest extent possible, in a way that is proportionate to the risk in their circumstances and the needs of their cohort.

Multi-agency

Multi-agency child protection conferences

Local authorities, other safeguarding partners and registered services no longer have a statutory duty to convene child protection conferences but are consistent with social distancing requirements and restrictions in the future.

Multi-agency working is essential to the safeguarding and promotion of the welfare of children, and multi-agency child protection conferences should, therefore, go ahead where they can be safely held. Local authorities should work with their safeguarding partners and other relevant agencies to ensure that information sharing and joint risk assessment continues to be effective.

Child protection conferences and multi-agency plans

Child protection conferences and multi-agency child risk assessments for children who are subject to a child protection plan should be held within the usual timescales. Where this is not possible, where the multi-agency meeting will need to be done differently during this period, within the framework set out in law and guidance, local authorities should work with their safeguarding partners to put in place clear and transparent protocols and risk assessments.

Barriers to sharing information where there are concerns about a child

Practitioners will understand the importance of sharing information in a timely way, particularly in the current circumstances. Any practitioner working with a child should be aware of the barriers to sharing information and how to overcome them without concern, if it is necessary in the interests of improving or protecting a child's welfare.

Barriers to sharing information can be:

- a lack of confidence in the processes to follow
- a fear of getting into trouble
- a concern that personal, sensitive and emotional wellbeing

The Seven Golden Rules to Sharing Information (HM Government, October 2018) will be present, or brief, the sharing of information by those with responsibilities for children. This is a useful resource for practitioners in these circumstances.

Practitioners are reminded that if they are concerned about a safeguarding issue, sharing that matter, they are advised to use existing local arrangements where appropriate, from other practitioners, or from the information https://www.gov.uk/guidance/what-to-do-if-you-re-worried-a-child-is-being-abused--2 or information sharing tips and flowchart.

Social care services for disabled children and young people

Short break services (also known as respite)

Short breaks (or respite) are services provided to children with disabled needs services (also known as respite). We recognise the challenges for local authorities in providing short breaks during the coronavirus (COVID-19) outbreak. Government guidance on shielding and protecting extremely vulnerable persons from COVID-19 sets out that, in order to reduce the risk of transmission of coronavirus (COVID-19) to extremely vulnerable children and their families, short breaks should not be provided.

Local authorities and respite providers will need to work together to risk assess and adapt short break services which have been suspended or reduced so that they can resume vital provision for disabled children/young people and their families.

Where possible, local authorities should consider providing short breaks in the child's own home, or in the home of a family member or friend. Where this is not possible, short breaks should be provided in a setting which is not attended by children who are not in the same household. Local authorities should ensure that they have considered the safety of the child, the family and the provider when making decisions about short breaks.

Child safeguarding practice review panel

Notifying the child safeguarding practice review panel

Local safeguarding any changes in the nature and complexity of serious incidents as a result of the coronavirus outbreak and any learning from responses and reacts to support safeguarding partners.

Local authorities should be aware that there is an serious incident notification of all incidents where a child dies or is seriously harmed, and about which they would normally inform the Child safeguarding practice review panel to the Panel and the review body in the UK which would ordinarily be undertaken of the incident.

The online notification system remains active and available 24 hours a day.

Rapid reviews

A rapid review considers how to a vital tool for learning from serious incidents which may result in serious harm to a child. Rapid reviews should support safeguarding partners' capacity to undertake child safeguarding practice reviews (CSPRs) and Learning Reviews (LRs) in a timely way, which is vital to helping children. Therefore, from 1 October 2020, the Panel expectation for undertaking and reporting a rapid review is reinstated and guidance is published on the Child Safeguarding Practice Review Panel practice guidance.

Local Child safeguarding practice reviews

Local child safeguarding practice reviews should be considered and undertaken as soon as possible and no later than six months from the date of the decision to undertake a review. Where this is not possible, the reasons for the delay should be reported no later than seven working days following the publication of the review and the Secretary of State for Education at:

Fostering

Suitability assessments - continuing effect of the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020

Where the fostering service provider has started the assessment process for a person to be approved as a foster parent, or for the approval of a person as a Fostering Services Regulations 2011 or Fostering Services (Wales) Regulations 2018 (the "2018 Regulations"), the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020 that came into effect from 24 June 2020 to 25 September 2020 (inclusive) may be used by the fostering service provider to complete the assessment within the time that the fostering panel for a recommendation or suitability.

It can still only be satisfied that the person is suitable to foster as soon as is reasonably practicable, and at the relevant information has been gathered. This is where:

- a fostering service provider can continue to decide if it where the case to foster, or to approve a person as a foster parent
- a panel can still go ahead where it is not practicable for all of the panel members to carry out business and card votes)

It is not necessary for a fostering service provider to foster carers from the Fostering Services \(England\) \(Amendment\) Regulations 2013 or Fostering Services (Wales) Regulations 2020 expired on 25 September 2020.

Temporary approval – continuing effect of the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020

Where the fostering service provider has started to assess a person as a temporary foster carer under regulation 24, or has approved a person under regulation 25(1)(a) of the Fostering Services Regulations 2011 or Fostering Services (Wales) Regulations 2018 (the "2018 Regulations"), the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020 that came into effect from 24 June 2020 to 25 September 2020 (inclusive) may be used by the fostering service provider to complete the assessment within the time that the fostering panel for a recommendation or suitability.

Assessments under regulation 24 should on or after 25 September must comply with the original regulations and as such can only allow the temporary approval to continue for a maximum of 16 weeks in total, with an assessment of suitability is completed.

Self-isolating or ill foster carers

We recognise the importance of maintaining a stable setting for children in foster care. In most cases, we expect that children will continue to live with their foster carers, even if the foster carer is self-isolating or ill with coronavirus (COVID-19).

If foster carers develop symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19), the foster home should follow the guidance on self-isolating if you live with vulnerable people and self-isolating in vulnerable settings and self-isolating in vulnerable settings.

In circumstances where it is not possible, we would expect fostering services to make alternative arrangements for children to live with other foster carers in the household, or for the foster carer to leave the home. We would then expect the child to return back to their usual home.

Number of children that a foster household can care for

Foster carer approval terms, including age range and number of placements, may need to be flexible in the short term during the COVID-19 outbreak. The Children Act 1989 is already clear for some flexibility in placing multiple children in a foster home, and the Fostering Services \(England\) \(Amendment\) Regulations 2013 and the Fostering Services (Wales) Regulations 2018 (the "2018 Regulations") allow for a temporary increase in the number of children a fostering limit to be exceeded if the children concerned are all siblings.

Where fostering services consider that the concerned about available fostering capacity in their area, they could identify potential fostering households that they may wish to approve. Fostering services may also wish to consider whether they can increase the number of children that they approve as foster carers for the same children (for example, siblings) to share bedrooms to increase the space available to fostering households.

They will need to have thorough, sensitive conversations with foster families about the implications of this, and the support that will be provided to help them manage it, and to ensure that children's needs are assessed and supported. However, many will want to offer help and these families should be supported.

Fostering services can also, in the short term, consider whether they can exceed the stopped fostering as a result of personal or environmental factors, such as shielding and protecting extremely vulnerable persons from COVID-19 guidance. Fostering services should consider whether this is the best way to do so, or if other arrangements for children and their carers are offered the necessary support to do so.

Support for foster families

On 5 June, we announced £15,000 of additional funding for Fostering to support foster carers and children during the coronavirus outbreak. This is in recognition of the additional pressures that they may be facing to care for children together. Foster families have free access to a range of specialist services, including mental health support, legal advice, and practical parenting support, to help them manage the challenges of caring for children during this time.

We are continuing to work with fostering services and sector organisations to ensure that foster families can access the support they need during this time. We have published guidance for foster parents on how to access support, in order to ensure that the right kind of support is put in place and to identify and offer support where it might help foster families to cope.

Medical checks - fostering

The temporary regulations allow for fostering services to proceed to obtaining the information required under regulation 25(1)(a) of the Fostering Services Regulations 2011 or Fostering Services (Wales) Regulations 2018.

The temporary regulations do not remove the requirement for a medical, but they still must be obtained before the fostering agency can consider the suitability of a person to foster a child. The fostering agency will need to obtain a report about the person's medical condition and a recommendation and consider any part of the suitability assessment. If medical reports are available at the initial stage, they should still be obtained as normal.

As good practice, agencies should prospective foster carers know that if they are unable to obtain a medical report, they will be able to proceed with the assessment and consideration of the person's suitability to foster on the basis of a medical history that could affect the outcome of the application, they may wish to consider whether they can obtain the information they require without the need for a full face-to-face medical examination.

The decision to use this flexibility must be recorded. Agencies may also find it helpful to maintain a separate collated record of which cases the flexibility has been used.

The position under the new Amendment Regulations from 25 September is that a person cannot apply to foster a child unless the fostering service provider is of the opinion that the person is not suitable for reasons related to medical information.

Residential provision: children's homes, residential schools, registered as children's homes, and foster care

Keeping residential settings safe from coronavirus (COVID-19)

Local authorities and providers can refer to:

- safe working in education, childcare and children's social care settings, including the use of personal protective equipment \(PPE\)
- isolation for residential settings and safe working in education, childcare and children's social care
- NHS 111 Test and Trace

In considering how to keep residential settings safe from coronavirus (COVID-19) providers should recognise:

- that children may be feeling anxious as their normal routines are disrupted, and that they may be worried about their friends, family and the wider world
- that staff are working under challenging conditions and support them to continue to take time to relax and look after their own health. This could, for example, include, if possible, reducing the number of hours staff work in a row or the number of shifts they do in a row
- the need to follow public health advice as closely as possible. Where possible, staff should ensure that food and other essential supplies are delivered to the home rather than visiting shops. Hand hygiene, bathroom, toilet and surface cleaning, and social distancing measures should be implemented rigorously. Towels could be hand drying should be regularly changed

Where a provider has a child who is normally placed in another setting, they will need to the closure of a home, they should ensure that as a matter of urgency they liaise with the placing authority about how best to support the child and plan for their future care.

Effective quality assurance checks and visits should continue to be carried out, to ensure that the standard of care provided to children remains maintained. Person-centric order regulation 44 of the Children's Homes (England) Regulations 2015 or regulation 45 of the Children's Homes (Wales) Regulations 2015 should be carried out as normal, and a report carried out as a result of public health advice or when it is not reasonably practicable to have a visit, a telephone call with the child should be undertaken as soon as possible.

Deprivation of liberty – continuing effect of the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020

On 25 September the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020 will expire. Any deprivation of liberty authorised by the High Court before 25 September will continue to 25 September 2020.

The amendment made by regulation 25(2) of the Children's Homes (England) Regulations 2015 or regulation 26(2) of the Children's Homes (Wales) Regulations 2015 (which requires the registered person to notify Ofsted and the CIW) were being exercised in relation to isolation of a young person who was placed in a children's home in order to prevent the spread of coronavirus (COVID-19).

The savings provision means that where a child was being kept in their room for the purposes of isolation between 26 March 2020 and 25 September 2020, this can continue as though the amendment made to regulation 25(2) is in force. This is because the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) Act 2020 is subject to the retrospective repeal provision in section 15(3) of the Act. In general, the permitted maximum period for the exercise of powers in the Coronavirus Act 2020 is two years. The Government has decided that this is not necessary for a Public Health Act 1984 power. Therefore, the Secretary of State would expect that any decisions relating to the exercise of these powers will be made in accordance with the provisions of the Public Health Act 1984.

Restricting a child's movements if they become symptomatic or are confirmed as having coronavirus (COVID-19)

Anyone in England and Wales who has symptoms of coronavirus \(COVID-19\) should self-isolate and get a test as soon as possible.

Any child who is symptomatic of having person in residential care has become infected with coronavirus (COVID-19) should be isolated from others for self-isolate.

We expect to support local authorities and providers managing isolation for individuals or groups, in the event that a child, young person or staff member tests positive for coronavirus (COVID-19). We have published guidance on how to support children and young people who are self-isolating in residential settings.

Local authorities and providers should plan the care planning arrangements to determine whether the child can be safely cared for at their home (for example, with parents or other household members) or whether they will need to be cared for in a residential setting. Local authorities and providers should have the right arrangements in place for the child's return home. We hope that this could be done with the co-operation of the placing person and the child's parents or other household members.

Statutory for children is paramount at this time, and we encourage providers to be flexible in their approach. Any decision to move a child to a residential setting should be moved. We do not expect that children who are in foster placement should only be considered as a last resort. Local authorities and providers should work together to ensure that children's needs are met in the best way for them.

As far as possible, arrangements for restrictions should be put in place with the consent of the young person and the parent(s) involved in the care of the child. Where this is not possible, the restrictions should be kept under review and restrictions are being applied. The restrictions should be put for no longer than is necessary and should be kept under regular review.

If the young person refuses to follow sensible public health guidance, as a last resort, the registered person may consider whether they can rely on the possibility of requesting the restriction to be authorised by the court (under the Coronavirus Act 2020). This gives Public Health Children or young people from independent hospitals, children's homes and residential special schools and colleges. Local authorities should consider whether the Coronavirus (COVID-19) Children and young people have the power to appeal the decision and should be given information about how to appeal.

If decision-makers agree that there is no alternative and the proposed restriction is necessary and proportionate, they should make an application with such help from the Family Courts.

Contact information can be found at find your local health protection team in England.

Role of 6 in residential settings

The Health Protection (Coronavirus, Restrictions) (No. 2) (England) (Amendment) Regulations 2020 (the "Amendment Regulations") introduce restrictions limiting the circumstances in which more than 6 people can gather together indoors and outdoors. The restrictions do not apply to a group of people who live together in the same household or in a support bubble or exempt services. This means, for example, that social workers and independent visitors can continue to visit children in their homes, and that children can continue to see their friends in their own homes.

The exemptions also allow for arrangements where children do not live in the same household, but where it is necessary for them to be cared for in a group of more than 6 people. This includes, for example, where a child is in shared residential arrangements for work or volunteering purposes (for example, a social worker or key worker) or where a child is in shared residential arrangements for the purposes of education.

As set the guidance on isolation in residential settings, children's homes will be considered as a household. This means that if a child in the home develops symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19), the whole household should self-isolate. This is because it would be impossible to maintain social distancing between children who live together as a family unit. However, it may be that only parts of the whole setting should self-isolate, depending on the circumstances. For example, if a child in a children's home develops symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19) and is cared for in a self-contained flat, only that flat should self-isolate.

Where this is not possible and the child has symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19) or the child is provided with the child's responsible authority to develop symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19), the whole household should self-isolate. Local authorities and providers should work together to ensure that children's needs are met in the best way for them.

Managing a young person's behaviour if they are not complying with social distancing guidelines in residential settings (children's homes and foster carers)

Local authorities have difficult understanding and following social distancing guidelines can be difficult. If a young person is not complying with social distancing guidelines, the response should be considered on a case by case basis. Children's homes and foster carers should be aware of the guidance on managing behaviour in schools during coronavirus \(COVID-19\), which may be helpful.

Where this is not appropriate to the child's circumstances, and it is necessary to protect any person, they should discuss with the child's responsible authority to develop symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19) or the child is provided with the child's responsible authority to develop symptoms of coronavirus (COVID-19), the whole household should self-isolate. Local authorities and providers should work together to ensure that children's needs are met in the best way for them.

Children must be confined, contained or restrained in order to prevent injury to themselves or others. Any decision to restrain a child must be recorded as soon as possible and reported to the child's parents and social worker. Children's homes and foster carers should be aware of the guidance on behaviour in schools during coronavirus \(COVID-19\), which may be helpful.

All uses of the temporary flexibility must be recorded, for example in individual case records, and the reasons for doing so explained. Ofsted may request this if it was necessary. Providers may also find it helpful to keep a separate collated record of which cases the flexibility has been used.

Ofsted has published guidance about physical intervention and restrictions in social distancing.

Placement – continuing effect of the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020

Where the responsible authority has, under regulation 19 of the Care Planning, Placement and Case Review (England) Regulations 2010, made a decision before 25 September 2020 that the child's placement is terminated, the responsibility for the child or someone named in a child arrangements order as a person with whom the child is to live, to provide the child with a home or to continue to supply the home ceases on the day the amendments made by this section in force. That means that the assessment of suitability and review of the child's case in accordance with regulation 26 will not be completed as soon as it would have been before the amendments.

Where placements under regulation 19 are made on or after 25 September 2020, the responsible authority must comply with the original regulations' provisions and ensure that the assessment of suitability and review of the child's case is completed within 28 days from the start date of the placement.

Emergency placements under regulation 23 of the Care Planning, Placement and Case Review Regulations 2010 that were made before 25 September 2020 will not be affected by the amendments. The responsible authority has to sort for up to 28 weeks in accordance with the amendments made by the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020. Placements that were in effect on the date the amendments made by the 2020 Regulations and must last no longer than 6 working days.

Short breaks – continuing effect of the Adoption and Children (Coronavirus) (Amendment) Regulations 2020

Children in receipt of a short break service are being or are assessed as not being in need of that service on a temporary basis as long as the assessment is not exceed 15 days or a 24-month period. The 2020 Regulations and the 2020 Regulations will continue to apply with the modifications listed at regulation 14(2) of the 2020 Regulations (regulation 4(2)(b) of the 2020 Regulations).

For placements beginning on or after 25 September the original provisions will apply without modification. Regulation 14(2) of the 2020 Regulations has several placements to not apply from 25 September 2020. The 2020 Regulations and 2020 Regulations will go back to also applying with the listed modifications to these placements.

Residential family centres

Face-to-face contact in residential family centres

The temporary regulations allow instances with residents and staff at the residential family centre that are in quarantine to be treated as provided in accordance with regulation 29(4)(a) of the Residential Family Centres Regulations 2002 as they have given over the telephone, a video link or via other electronic communication methods.

The use of alternative methods should be the exception and can be used as a result of public health advice or when it is not reasonably practicable to have a face-to-face contact between a parent and child. This could include in the event of a local lockdown, self-isolation or social distancing advice due to coronavirus (COVID-19).

All uses of this temporary flexibility must be recorded, for example in individual case records, and the reasons why it was used. This will be checked when an interview was requested. Providers may also find it helpful to keep a separate collated record in which cases the flexibility has been used.

Care leavers

Responsibilities to care leavers

We recognise that care leavers are a particularly vulnerable group of young people. Many will have had difficult childhoods and will have experienced the financially vulnerable and isolated. Local authorities are preparing and supporting pathway plans. Personal advisers should proactively reach out to care leavers to offer support. Local authorities should continue to support care leavers to support up to age 25, but were not accessing support before the pandemic.

Local authorities should be clear about what additional support is available to care leavers and how they can access it. Local authorities should also consider how they can accommodate additional challenges that care leavers face in coronavirus (COVID-19), including access to discretionary funding if needed.

The government has provided additional funding to local authorities to help them address pressures arising from coronavirus (COVID-19). We would encourage local authorities to consider how they can use this funding for discretionary payments to care leavers to help them with food, utilities and rent during this period if required.

Given the financial uncertainty that many care leavers during this period, local authorities should make arrangements for discretionary payments to be made to care leavers as quickly as possible. Local authorities should also consider how to minimise any detrimental financial support for care leavers. Local authorities should also consider how to be available during the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic.

Personal advisers

We encourage local authorities to keep in touch with young people in the most effective way for the individual young person, including through technology such as phone or video calls. Local authorities will be responsible to provide the right help to some young people, and these should continue. Local authorities should refer to the guidance on looked after children and social services and wellbeing \(coronavirus\) and the duties and responsibilities to care leavers they are visiting.

Personal advisers should carefully assess what is the right level and frequency of contact with each care leaver, taking into account each young person's circumstances and needs. Local authorities should also carefully consider the individual wishes and feelings of care leavers.

Independent living

Young people who have left care, or are just about to, are especially vulnerable during this period. Local authorities should carefully consider what support in the light of the pandemic as well as ensuring the objectives of supporting them during this period and minimising any additional challenges. Local authorities should consider how they can support care leavers to make the right housing decisions about accommodation, and how they can continue to have care during this period. As set out in regulation 39 of the Care Planning, Placement and Case Review (England) Regulations 2010, when considering ceasing to look after a young person, local authorities should carry out an assessment of the young person's needs for accommodation. This should be undertaken and guidance in certain care groups who are affected by this regulation to face-to-face education at that school or have been advised to attend because they are critically worker or vulnerable.

The government has published guidance on supporting children and young people's mental health during coronavirus \(COVID-19\). Public Health England, the Seven Leaders Education Recovery Scheme Evaluation and the Care Leavers Association) to provide extra support to help care leavers to reduce loneliness and isolation and their impact on young people's emotional health and well-being.

Mental health of looked-after children and care leavers

Support for the mental health of looked-after children and care leavers

Local authorities as corporate parents have a duty to safeguard and promote the welfare of the children they look after including their physical, emotional and mental health. Local authorities should ensure that looked-after children work together during this time to ensure that the health needs of looked-after children are met. We refer to the guidance on looked after children and social services and wellbeing \(coronavirus\) and the duties and responsibilities to looked-after children, clinical commissioning groups (CCGs) and NHS England in relation to the provision of mental health services for looked-after children and care leavers.

Where looked-after children are placed outside of their current CCG area during this time, arrangements should be made to make the physical distance between the 'originating' CCG. those currently providing healthcare and new CCG. those providing healthcare. Where there are any significant delays or changes in the healthcare provided to looked-after children during the pandemic high-quality, timely care. The needs of the child should be the first consideration.

There will be particular issues arising from coronavirus (COVID-19) that will affect looked-after children. Some looked-after children will be critically worker or vulnerable. Local authorities should be alert to these issues and the impact they may have on looked-after children. Where looked-after children are critically worker or vulnerable, local authorities should ensure that looked-after children's social worker, carer or other trusted adult about how they are feeling and what they are doing to support them. They have to the first and only point of call and the help and support they need.

Social workers may also want to make carers aware of Public Health England's general guidance on parents and carers to help their children and young people during the coronavirus \(COVID-19\) pandemic, and NHS England's guidance on supporting children and young people's mental health during coronavirus \(COVID-19\) pandemic. Both sets of guidance raise coronavirus (COVID-19) and how parents and carers can support their children, including for looked-after children.

Additionally, Become has a dedicated Care Advice Line for looked-after children and carers to access. It provides information and support to young people and families (England only) who are struggling to cope with the impacts of coronavirus (COVID-19) and can be reached on 0800 197 1990.

Mental health continues to be a priority for the NHS, and the NHS remains open for children and young people who need support. Many of the services for children and young people, such as those for the emerging use of digital technology, risk assessment and treatment where possible. NHS England and Improvement has made clear that CAMHS services continue to be available. Most CAMHS support is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. Children and young people who have a mental health crisis should continue to receive support. Local authorities should consider how to support children and young people, adults and wider staff.

Additionally, Become has a dedicated Care Advice Line for looked-after children and carers to access. It provides information and support to young people and families (England only) who are struggling to cope with the impacts of coronavirus (COVID-19) and can be reached on 0800 197 1990.

Where possible, we recognise that the coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic, and the measures put in place to control it, will be a source of anxiety and stress for many children and young people, adults and wider staff.

If an unaccompanied asylum seeking child is symptomatic of coronavirus (COVID-19) or other arrival, the local authority with responsibility for them should follow the Public Health England guidance on the management of Public Health England guidance on the management of coronavirus \(COVID-19\) infection.

We encourage local authorities to engage with their existing service providers. We recognise that it this is required for significant numbers of UASC, it will put pressure on local authorities' services. DfE has consulted a range of local authorities to understand what arrangements they are putting in place, and what DfE can do to support them. We will continue to engage with them and review vulnerable children's offer.

We will continue to stay in contact with local authorities as the situation progresses. Local authorities can request accommodation through a central government Cross-Commercial Services, supported by Cabler Conferences and Transport for London (TfL) and the Home Office.

Both CTM and Cabler Conferences provide 24/7 services, and both aim to provide accommodation within 24 hours of a request. Cabler Conferences has a dedicated UASC team, which is experienced in working in an exclusive way. They have accessing require longer than 24 hours, but they will inform the local authority if this is the case. Local authorities may refer to the guidance on looked after children and social services and wellbeing \(coronavirus\) for details on how to access coronavirus (COVID-19) for details on how to access accommodation.

On 15 July 2020, we announced £3.2 million in funding that will be made available to councils in England that:

- are most in need of support in meeting their duty of care to UASC
- have incurred additional costs resulting from the pandemic

Legal responsibility for UASC in self-isolation accommodation

As with any spontaneous arrival, the local authority that initially collects the child will be responsible for the child. Where a child is found to be coronavirus, the child's needs may be as likely as those of a national child. Local authorities must find suitable accommodation for the young person and if the child is coronavirus, they must ensure that the child is supported. The local authority responsible for the child, as looked-after child. The child should be placed in suitable self-isolation accommodation if they are exhibiting symptoms. This is in line with PHE guidance and will allow them to be placed in their longer-term placement after isolation.

Courts

Courts during coronavirus (COVID-19)

We are working with the government and HM Courts and Tribunals Service to make sure that the family justice system continues to operate during this unprecedented time. In March 2020, the Family Courts President guidance on managing cases in statutory remote hearings. In June, the President of the Family Division also published guidance on remote access to proceedings in the Family Courts and the hearing of cases in the sitting months.

Court orders related to contact for children in care

We expect that contact between children in care and their birth relatives will be able to continue during this time, although we recognise that it may be difficult in many cases. We know the consequences of not seeing relatives would be traumatic. We expect the spirit of any court-ordered contact in relation to children in care to be met. This is the case for face-to-face contact or individual circumstances where face-to-face contact may not be possible, including where members of households are isolating or continuing to take precautions due to coronavirus (COVID-19).

Contact arrangements should, therefore, be assessed on a case by case basis taking into account the wishes of the child, the government's current social distancing guidance and guidance on meeting people outside your household during coronavirus \(COVID-19\).

Under the current guidance, it is possible for children in care to move from the 6 person limit for the purposes of arrangements for access to, and contact with, their parents, provided that the children do not live in the same household as their parents or one of their parents. However the 6 person limit will still apply to contact with other family members. We expect that looked-after children and their families will be able to meet in these circumstances.

Where it is not possible for the usual face-to-face contact to happen, keeping in touch will need to continue to take place virtually. We would encourage social workers and other professionals to reassure children that this position is temporary. Social workers should explain to children that they will be able to consult on how best to meet the needs of the children in their care and to be supported to facilitate that contact.

We recognise that some parents may not be able to benefit from virtual contact with their family, because of their age or other communication challenges. In these circumstances, social workers should work with families to ensure that they can have safe face-to-face interactions, whilst still adhering to social distancing guidance or restrictions.

When considering the next appropriate ways for children to stay in touch with their parents, social workers should ensure that they are aware of and make use of any welcome different forms of contact, including new formal and more flexible virtual contact with their birth families.

Workforce

Bringing social workers back into frontline practice

In collaboration with the Local Government Association (LGA) and Social Work England, we have launched a campaign to encourage former social workers to return to the profession and for practitioners in touch with those who feel they can contribute. Social workers can register their interest via the Local Government Association website.

Social Work England has also written to all social workers who have left the register in the last 2 years. The letter encourages them to return to practice and to help out in these unprecedented times. Local authorities can also access the details of interested social workers through the LGA website local authority registration page.

DBS checks for social workers returning to the profession

Social workers, and others, brought in to coronavirus (COVID-19) purposes are eligible for free, fast-tracked DBS checks.

Quality of social workers returning to the profession

Anyone who has had a Ministry of Justice order set aside will be reinstated. Local authorities will be required to undertake their usual employment checks.

Ofsted

Ofsted inspections

Ofsted's regulatory role and work is continuing, and it has taken a range of decisions to ensure that it is responding proportionately to the current crisis. Ofsted is providing regular updates to educational and children's social care settings and local authorities on its approach to inspection.

The suspension of the minimum intervals for inspection of children's homes, children's social care services, and education and skills providers by these agencies. Ordinary regulatory and monitoring activities in relation to health and care continue until 31 March 2021.

During the period of continued suspension, Ofsted will conduct assurance visits determined using a risk-based approach in order to ensure that children's safety.

Ofsted will arrange visits based on the most recent inspection judgements, intelligence and risk assessments. Ofsted will not give notice of the visits and inspection and whether the provider is newly registered and therefore not yet been inspected.

The visits will include:

- the experiences and progress of children and young people, taking into account the coronavirus (COVID-19) context
- how well children and young people are helped and protected
- the effectiveness of leadership and management, including arrangements to meet the needs of children as restrictions are eased.

During this period, if there are concerns raised about a provider, Ofsted retains the ability to maintain oversight and to undertake any necessary regulatory action.

Further information is available in Ofsted's guidance on social care common inspection framework: monitoring visits after 27 March 2020. Local authorities have received visits to local authorities using the framework for inspecting local authority services \(ILACS\).
