The purpose of the consultation

The Welsh Government's Talk with Me programme launched in November 2020. It was developed to promote speech, language and communication (SLC) development, with a focus on the early years (0 to 5 years).

Talk with Me aimed to promote the SLC skills of babies and young children aged 0 to 5 years in Wales at a universal, population and targeted level. We have been able to demonstrate positive impact and outcomes in all areas covered in the first delivery plan (<https://www.gov.wales/talk-me-speech-language-and-communication-slc-delivery-plan>).

Having delivered the programme successfully for five years, Welsh Government wishes to build on the successes of Talk with Me to extend the workplan and include children aged 5 to 11. We want to ensure that our priorities align with those of our key stakeholders, including babies, children and their families; and our partners within and outside Welsh Government.

The evidence is clear that whilst a focus on prevention in the earliest years continues to be important, children beyond this age range also need access to effective universal and targeted SLC support.

Overview and context

Speech, Language and Communication (SLC): Delivery Plan 2026-2030

“ The Welsh Government aims to raise awareness of the importance of SLC and ensure that babies and children aged 0 to 11 who need support are identified early and are supported effectively with interventions delivered at the point of need. ”

1 in 5 children and young people are struggling with their speech, language and communication (SLC)[1] and more than 10% have long term speech, language and communication needs (SLCN) which create barriers to communication or learning in everyday life[2].

Research shows that children living in poverty suffer disproportionately from delayed language[3]. By this we mean those children whose language skills are developing significantly more slowly than those of other children of the same age, but who do not have a specific disorder. Language skills are a critical factor in the intergenerational cycles that can perpetuate poverty, as poor communication skills are passed down from parent to child[4].

Key facts

- 32% of children with speech, language and communication needs (SLCN) live in areas of high social disadvantage[5]

- 30% of children in Wales with Additional Learning Needs have SLCN, the most common type of Additional Learning Need in Wales[6]
(<https://www.gov.wales/talk-me-phase-2-speech-language-and-communication-slc-delivery-plan-2026-2030-html-0#6>)
- Children with SLCN are more likely to experience mental health problems, and less likely to access support, leading to a double disadvantage[7]
(<https://www.gov.wales/talk-me-phase-2-speech-language-and-communication-slc-delivery-plan-2026-2030-html-0#7>)
- SLC skills are a key indicator of wellbeing in children, helping them to manage emotions, communicate feelings and establish relationships[8]
(<https://www.gov.wales/talk-me-phase-2-speech-language-and-communication-slc-delivery-plan-2026-2030-html-0#8>)
- Investment into supporting language skills has a very high impact on outcomes for a very low cost[9] (<https://www.gov.wales/talk-me-phase-2-speech-language-and-communication-slc-delivery-plan-2026-2030-html-0#9>)

The way forward in Wales

Welsh Government has worked constructively with the Royal College of Speech and Language Therapists (RCSLT) in Wales, along with a wide range of other stakeholders, to deliver Talk with Me, the SLC delivery plan (<https://www.gov.wales/talk-me-speech-language-and-communication-slc-delivery-plan>) published in 2020. The delivery plan focuses on universal and targeted support for SLC, and not on the delivery of specialist, individual level Speech and Language Therapy.

We have worked to raise the profile of SLC in the early years and to develop effective early identification and intervention pathways to ensure that children are supported at the right time, in the right place and by the right person.

Any baby or child, irrespective of their age, where they live or their family circumstances, might require support in developing their SLC skills. Our aim is to ensure that children throughout Wales have access to high quality universal and targeted support as required, to help develop their SLC skills.

This consultation document, developed in discussion with RCSLT, aims to take our learning from Talk with Me and use it to drive improvement in a way in which more children in Wales are supported to develop their SLC skills.

Ministers and officials have worked collaboratively on the draft plan to ensure that we take a cross-sectoral approach (to include childcare and play, education, health and social care policy) that engages families and builds upon existing successes.

Consultation aims

We are carrying out a consultation with babies, children and their families to ensure that their voice is at the forefront of SLC policy development.

We also invite all those whose work with, and whose responsibilities have an impact, either directly or indirectly, on SLC development, to contribute to the conversation. We want your help to identify any further actions we may need to take to further raise the profile of SLC, and to ensure that effective identification and support are in place. We will need all parts of the system (education, health, social care etc.) to work together to help us succeed.

Our ambition is to do more to support babies and children with, or at risk of, SLCN and to build upon what we know works so that every child gets the best start in life and is able to access effective support as they grow.

The purpose of this consultation document is to inform conversations with key stakeholders; to establish what works to support babies and children with, or at risk of SLCN; and identify what other action we might consider taking in the future. The actions set out below give examples of potential activity under each objective.

Please note that existing commitments underway under Talk with Me are included for context (in italics) and are not subject to this consultation.

The list is not intended to be exhaustive and the consultation process will inform priorities.

Proposed objectives are as follows:

Objective 1: Raise public awareness of speech, language and communication

Outcome 1: The families of babies and children, as well as children themselves, will be informed and equipped to understand the importance of speech, language and communication (SLC) and to be able to access support as required.

Key Action: To promote key messages to the families of babies and children to support the development of SLC skills.

New activity may include:

- Undertake a literature review to establish evidence based SLC messages for children aged 5 to 11.
- Undertake a national, bilingual publicity campaign to raise awareness of patterns of typical development and strategies to promote SLC in children aged 5 to 11.
- Promote key messages to practitioners through Curriculum for Wales resources.
- Consider and disseminate information on the impact of screens and technology on children's health and wellbeing, including SLC skills.

Existing commitments under Talk with Me will continue, including:

- Continue with publicity campaign (<https://www.gov.wales/talk-with-me>) for children aged 0 to 5 with a focus on specific populations e.g. care experienced children.
- Work with Public Health Wales colleagues responsible for Every Child resources to ensure that consistent SLC messages are included.
- Promote key messages to practitioners through the Early Childhood Play, Learning and Care (ECPLC) resources (<https://hwb.gov.wales/curriculum-for-wales/early-childhood-play-learning-and-care-in-wales/>).

Objective 2: Improve the identification of SLCN in babies and children

New activity may include:

- Work with education colleagues to consider how effective schools and settings' existing assessment arrangements are in identifying children with SLCN.
- If necessary, commission an independent review of evidence based identification tools for children aged 5 and older in Welsh and English.

Existing commitments under Talk with Me will continue, including:

- Continue the development of the bilingual early years surveillance and intervention package (Prosiect Penguin (<https://www.gov.wales/new-15m-speech-language-and-communication-tool-young-children-under-development>)).

Objective 3: Ensure the workforce supporting babies and children are informed and equipped to provide effective universal and targeted SLC interventions Outcome 3: Accessible, evidence based universal and targeted SLC interventions will be delivered at the point of need to improve SLC skills and reduce the risk of SLCN impacting on children's development and wellbeing.

Objective 4: Upskill the childcare and play, education, health and social care workforce to address SLCN

Outcome 4: The childcare and play, education, health and social care workforce in Wales will be highly trained and equipped with the skills to support babies, children and families where there are identified needs in the development of SLC skills. This will ensure that children receive appropriate support from the people closest to them.

Key Action 4: To ensure the childcare and play, education, health and social care workforce in Wales are highly trained so that SLC identification and support are provided to babies and children at the right time and that interventions are monitored to ensure they are making a positive difference to the child's development.
